A Prohibition Item,
Time's Whirligig,
Seals Might Be Atheists.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

OUR DEPRESSION has not reduced all to penury. Last August income tax returns show that 504 Americans had incomes of more than a million dollars a year. The total incomes of those with $50,000 a year or more total almost 6,000 million dollars.

At midnight yesterday 4,000,000 Americans had finished filing income tax reports, telling Uncle Sam how much they owed him. The agony is over for this year.

FOR NEXT year, to understand the income tax, read "Memorandum re Federal Income Taxation," with a supplement of over 300 pages written by Dr. Joseph J. Klein, C. P. A., LL. B., and published by John Wiley & Sons.

This book, written by the leading income tax expert in the United States, may save you money on a big or little income.

Every year since 1923, the Treasury has handed back more than $100,000,000 of income tax collected. In 1928, refunds amounted to $230,000,000, in 1929, to $378,000,000. Thousands of taxpayers have neglected opportunities to secure refunds. Perhaps you have done so.

DR. KLEIN'S book will show you how to get the refund, if you are entitled to any, also how to resist assessments that you think unwarranted. And, in addition, the book will enable an amateur to prepare his own tax returns.

Many of the richest men in the United States consult Dr. Klein about their taxation. His book tells how the head of a family may, legally and properly, by use of trusts and corporations, greatly reduce taxation.

HENRY H. CURRAN, who doesn't believe in prohibition, says that without it 2,000,000 Americans would have had no income tax to pay this year.

"Without prohibition the national government would be taking in about $882,000,000 this year in revenue on wine, beer and spirits."

The worst of it, according to Mr. Curran, is:

"All these hundreds of millions and more go into the pockets of bootleggers, gunmen, racketeers, except sums paid to prohibition agents and police in graft and bribes."

APART FROM prohibition THEORY a little prohibition FACT reported by the Associated Press from Wilmington, N. C., may interest you.

Leopold Roberts, aged 28, was driving a mail truck, accompanied by Deputy Sheriff Starling, aged 35, on the outskirts of the city. Prohibition agents who thought the truck looked like a bootlegging truck ordered the driver to stop.

Bound to protect the mails, the driver, thinking he was held up by highwaymen, refused. He and the deputy sheriff with him were both shot dead by the earnest prohibition officers.

THEY SAY Roberts, the mail driver, fired first, which is to his credit, if he thought it was just one of the many attempted robberies.

Nobody should condemn hastily any efforts of prohibition agents to enforce the law.

But, in shooting at truck drivers, an exception ought to be made in favor of mail drivers.

STRANGE ARE life's contrasts. One of the greatest athletes this country ever knew is digging ditches in California.

Charles the Fifth, greatest European ruler, except Charlemagne and Napoleon, retired to a convent, a sad, dull life. Croesus lost all his money, barely escaped being burned alive by Cyrus. A chance exclamation made on the bonfire saved his life.

AND CONSIDER the case of Harry K. Long, buried in Detroit yesterday. He was a humble worker in an automobile plant when death came for him two years after he celebrated his golden wedding.

Years ago he was as great in his line as any man. Perhaps you saw him in the circus, bowing in spangles, dashing along a springboard and turning somersaults over the backs of twenty-two elephants. Not one or two, mind you, but TWENTY-TWO elephants.

"The whirligig of time brings in his revengeance," indeed.

"NO GREATER grief than to remember days of joy when misery is at hand."

Dante, who wrote that, knew the bitterness of holding out his hand to beg. It is even possible that some of the 504 Americans that recently reported to Uncle Sam incomes of more than $1,000,000 a year, may do the same.

A STORY yesterday afternoon reported the sealing ship Viking, carrying a film director and 150 others, had blown up at sea.

This reminds you that at the moment seals are swimming in from the wide oceans where they hunt and live, to gather at the Pribilof Islands where the males and females meet and young seals are born.

As the seals swim north, swift ships belonging to Uncle Sam go along to protect them from piratical destruction.

THIS MIGHT interest atheists who deny that this earth is governed and protected in its journey through the ether or "continuum," as Einstein prefers to call it.

The seals similarly would deny the existence of anything protecting them on their way to the hymeneal nursery.

Attorney Advises Citizens Commtitee on 'Violations;' Justified by Waldschmidt

Attorney Earl F. Reed today admitted that he had advised the Citizens' Committee that many of City Council's actions in passing ordinances for payment of bills were illegal.

Mr. Reed, legal adviser of the committee in its investigation and audit of the Department of Supplies, also said that he had advised the committee that the ordinance should have recited the reason why bids had not been taken for the purchase of various items.

SCANS RECORDS

District Attorney Andrew T. Park's office is checking all city ordinances passed by City Council involving expenditures for the purchase of supplies without the formality of bids. County detectives are conducting the investigation, which is under the direction of Assistant District Attorney William H. Colvin.

The Wallace Act, providing for the payment of bills in an emergency without the formality of asking for bids, in the opinion of Mr. Reed, has been carried beyond the limits originally intended.

Mr. Reed said the impression was that the validity of the act will not be determined by any decision which may be rendered this week by the Supreme Court in the Neptune meter case.

UPHOLDS COUNCIL

City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt today said he did not think City Council had overstepped its authority and had passed illegal resolutions for the payment of bills where bids had not been taken. He said:

"The Wallace act is broad and court decisions have sustained it. Part of the original act as it refers to cities of the first class was repealed, but the sections pertaining to cities of the second class still stand."

Accusations against the city Department of Public Works by Henry Oliver Evans, former controller, in which he states that irregularities exist in the final estimates on paving contracts, were to be given consideration today in the finance committee of City Council.

Girl Kin of Duke Returns To Romance With Butler

WASHINGTON, March 17.—(INS.)—Miss Gytha Stourton, great grandaughter of the fourteenth Duke of Norfolk, pretty and prominent socially in this city and London, has recrossed the Atlantic Ocean to continue her romance here with the former butler of the British embassy.

Following the refusal of her family in London to consent to her marriage to Florvanti del Agnes, she said here today.

"There is nothing to say, except that I am still engaged."

She went abroad alone last fall to seek parental approval, but her father announced in London that "any engagement between my daughter and Del 'Agnes is impossible and absurd."

Del 'Agnes is a member of an aristocratic but poor Italian family. He said he was obliged to take the position as major domo at the embassy here during the regime of former Ambassador Sir Esme Howard, because of his failure to obtain other work. Miss Stourton is a cousin of Sir Esme, and was in charge of social affairs at the embassy for Lady Isabelle.

GIRL, 7, SLAIN; MAN HELD

By M. J. RUMIN
Staff Correspondent.

CONEMAUGH, Pa., March 17.—Whisked away during the night to Johnstown by state police who feared citizens would make an effort to seize him by breaking into the borough lockup, Harry Starchok, 28, of 249 Greene street, today pleaded guilty to the murder of 7-year-old Betty Mowrey, daughter of a friend and neighbor.

He was arraigned before Burgess Isaac Jones this afternoon, and, after entering a plea of guilty, was taken to the county jail at Ebensburg by state troopers.

Jones said Starchok signed a confession in which he admitted attacking the girl prior to killing her in the cellar of his home.

Several hours later he took the body to the next door attic, according to the confession, the burgess said.

BODY IN ATTIC

The body of the little girl, missing since Friday, was discovered yesterday beneath the attic floor in a vacant house adjoining that of Starchok.

District Attorney D. F. Weimer today said Starchok, after a grilling of several hours, admitted killing the girl.

BANK'S LOSS BLAMED ON 'NUMBERS'

Officials Say Confession Of Woman Teller Revealed Heavy Plays in Lottery

Victimized by the numbers racket, according to her confession to state banking officials and a representative of the American Surety Company, a woman today finds herself in the toils of the law. She is Miss Pearl Ida Ferguson, 37, of 2318 Woodward avenue, Brookline, former teller of the Dormont Savings and Trust Company. She played as high as $75 a day on the numbers, according to her confession.

Into the hands of numbers writers have gone, banking authorities say they were told. Miss Ferguson's own savings and $5,700 from the bank which employed her.

Miss Ferguson was arraigned before Alderman Thomas P. Flanigan yesterday on the charge of embezzlement. She waived hearing for court upon testimony of J. D. Swigart, state bank examiner, that he had in his possession a full confession.

MONEY PAID BANK

Appearing with Swigert in the prosecution of the case was a representative of the American Surety Company, who announced that the funds had been covered by bond and had been paid back to the bank.

Respected by friends and neighbors and trusted with the Christmas savings fund of the Dormont Savings and Trust Company, Miss Ferguson had made her home with her married sister, Mrs. R. E. Harris, at the Woodward avenue address, having come to Pittsburgh from West Virginia. She had been in the employ of the Dormont bank for nearly a year.

According to her alleged confession to a representative of the surety company, the peculations dated back to May, 1930. The shortage was not discovered until December.

PLAYED EVERY DAY

She said, according to the bonding company representative, that she had played the numbers almost every day. Misguided by the false hope of sudden wealth in a promise of 600 to 1 on the payoff of a 1,000 to 1 shot, she succumbed to the lure and gambled as high as $50 and $75 a day, it was said.

FAILS TO GET BOND

Day after day her gambling stakes, according to the confession, grew in a desperate effort to recoup losses.

Since the shortage was discovered friends and relatives have made repeated efforts to raise funds that she might not go to jail, but up until yesterday they had been unsuccessful. A $10,000 bond for her release was not available and she was taken back to the county jail awaiting an opportunity to enter a plea or stand trial in Criminal Court.

One member of the audience thanking Park for the talk asked if Park was going to be a candidate for re-election.

3 MOVIE MEN MISSING; 20 DEAD

Pinchot's Nephew, Leader Of Party, Feared Killed; Survivors Relate Horror

By E. A. JEFFERY
International News Service.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., March 17.—After battling through the long northland night across shifting ice floes and against an icy Arctic wind, 118 survivors of the ill-starred sealing vessel Viking, destroyed by an explosion in the outer reaches of White Bay, had struggled to safety on Saint Barbe Island today.

Not one of the survivors could tell of the fate of L. Varick Frissell, New York society man, independent motion picture producer and nephew of Gov. Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, whose talking film expedition into the sub-Arctic wastes ended in tragedy when a mysterious explosion demolished the Viking and took a toll of at least 20 lives.

FATE STILL MYSTERY

The fate of Frissell and his chief aides, Harry Sargent, Boston social registerite, and A. E. Penrod, well-known cameraman, remained locked in the frozen wastes of White Bay. Whether they met instant death when the stern of the Viking was smashed by the blast or escaped with their lives had not been ascertained.

As the hours passed, however, hope for the rescue of the three adventurous film men waned. The survivors, restored to coherency by food and warmth after their heroic struggle over the ice-floes, told gruesome stories of the horrible death of at least a score of the Viking's personnel.

Council Asked to Pay For Kline's River Junket

That Mayor Charles H. Kline may have refused to pay the Pittsburgh Steamboat Company—owners of the ill-fated steamer Greater Pittsburgh—$3,226.17 "for services rendered" because members of City Council and other city officials did not ride the boat, was suggested as a possibility today by those acquainted with events during the jaunt down the Ohio River in 1929.

This developed as members of the Finance Committee of Council prepared to consider a statement of $3,226.17 presented to City Council yesterday by H. M. Oliver, receiver for the Pittsburgh Steamboat Company.

The bill was incurred during the voyage of city and county officials to Cairo and Cincinnati for the celebration of the canalization of the Ohio River.

Capt. W. B. Rodgers, one of the owners of the boat, said today that when the bill—totaling $13,226.17—was presented for payment, Mayor Kline refused payment because he said "Rodgers said mean things about the trip."

During the trip, it is alleged, there were frequent transfers due to reports that the steamer Queen City, chartered for the trip by county officials, was reputed "wet." The steamer Greater Pittsburgh was "dry."

PROTESTS HALT COYNE'S 'STEAM ROLLER' AT HARRISBURG

PAY RAISES, NEW JUDGES DELAYED

Senator, Alive to Protests, Eases Pressure for Bills; Says 'Maybe They're Bad'

By ED PRENDERGAST
Staff Correspondent

HARRISBURG, March 17.—Allegheny County's repercussion over the bills of Senator James J. Coyne—salary raises and school board changes—found the Oakland leader with an ear to the ground today.

While his bill to give Pittsburgh's Council the right to raise salaries of members of the city cabinet from $8,000 to $12,000 a year passed second reading in the House, the new political power whose steam-roller moved so swiftly last week bowed to the wishes of his people and he pushed two of his bills back into committee. He said last night:

"Maybe they're bad bills. I don't know. Anyhow, they're back in committee and the committee can do what it pleases with them."

He referred to the bill in the Senate which would raise the city controller's salary from $5,000 to $8,000 from the city, although he gets also $4,000 from the Board of Public Education, and the bill which would allow the city permission to give elective officers who served 20 years the right to pensions, including mayor, controller, councilmen, etc.

DEFENDS HOUSE BILL

The House bill the Senator defended, pointing out that one cabinet member, Edward G. Lang, gets $2,000 salary less than one of his employes, City Engineer Reppert, who gets $10,000. He said:

"This is an optional bill, and would leave it up to the Council and not the Legislature. The Council is responsible to the people of Pittsburgh. But the House can knock it down if it wants to."

It was understood definite opposition had developed in the House against it several of Gov. Pinchot's ardent supporters asserting they will vote negatively.

SCHOOL BILL WAITS

The Rooney bill remained in committee. It would provide the election of the school board by the people, instead of by the judges.

Meanwhile, Senator Coyne was understood to have the naming of at least one of the two judges provided in the bill which today goes to the Governor. It was believed the Governor would consider the bill and the appointments, letters from Allegheny County protesting the measure having reached his desk.

The signatures of the presiding officers of the two branches of the Legislature last night were affixed to the bill, and the chief executive has 10 days to act on it.

COYNE SHOWS POWER

The withdrawals of the bills by the Oakland leader, known as one of the smartest of politicians, once more called attention to his sagacity and growing strength. Based on the fact that he knows what he wants, and his ability to aid other members of Senate and House, and the compactness of the Allegheny County delegation, excepting perhaps Frank J. Harris and William D. Mansfield, in the Senate, and Carl Baldrige in the House, Coyne showed his power in the bill for the two additional judges.

Those who say Mayor Kline moved into the House last week and by "trading" votes with the Philadelphia organization obtained passage of the judgeship bill by a vote of 136 to 4 are met by others who point out that Coyne, not Kline, was behind the push, with Kline playing the marionet and Coyne pulling the strings.

PHILADELPHIA PLEA SEEN

It was rumored Philadelphia may also want three additional judges, although its Municipal Court of 11 men handles cases that the county and other courts in Allegheny County must care for. Philadelphia also has 28 police magistrates, besides its higher courts. In the event this bill, still in doubt, comes up, the Allegheny delegation will be expected to return the compliment.

Complimentary or otherwise, most legislators believe Coyne could push through almost any reasonable measure he wished, with enough friends in the East, among the rural members, and with the West almost solid behind him.

300 'SUSPECTS' IN GIRL KILLING

SAN DIEGO, Cal., March 17.—(INS.)—Authorities of cities from Portland, Ore., to the Mexican border today joined in the gigantic task of investigating the recent movements of some 300 known eccentrics in a desperate effort to locate the slayer of Virginia Brooks, 10-year-old schoolgirl.

A "Brooks case bureau," in charge of Los Angeles and San Diego detectives and co-operating with a staff of scientists and specialists, has been set up here to organize the man-hunt on a more scientific basis and to eliminate all false "tips" and "clues."

Ture Wallin, 28, who was arrested at Tecate, Mex., as a suspect, was under close guard today as authorities questioned him further regarding his departure for Mexico shortly after the Brooks girl vanished on her way to school.

IRELAND SENDS U. S. GREETINGS

DUBLIN, Ireland, March 17.—(AP.)—William T. Cosgrave, president of the Irish Free State, gave the Associated Press this St. Patrick's Day message for the United States:

"All is well with the Saorstat Eireann. We are continuing with increasing success to build the old Irish nation anew, to preserve and strengthen its distinctive nationality, to secure for Ireland's sons and daughters a living in their own land and enjoyment of a freedom not less than that of any other nation.

"We are increasing our stability year by year. Last year we were one of the few countries in the world which increased export trade and developed home production despite the universal depression which hung like a dark cloud over the world. We pray that cloud will pass away.

"To the millions of our race who have found homes in the United States, I, in behalf of the Free State and the government which I head, extend cordial and heartfelt greetings on this St. Patrick's Day.

"God bless you all."

ROAD ENGINEER HERE NAMED

HARRISBURG, March 17.—Leo Campbell, Castle Shannon engineer, has been named as maintenance engineer of road district No. 5, which includes Allegheny County, by Samuel S. Lewis, secretary of state highways, it was learned today.

Campbell succeeds Charles H. Abbott, of Mt. Oliver, who was relieved of his duties two weeks ago after an audit of the Pittsburgh district situation.

Secretary Lewis refused to disclose any charges against Abbott or Robert Beatty, also of Mt. Oliver, the superintendent of maintenance, who was dismissed at the same time, or Cecil Stephens, foreman, who was suspended.

4 MEN INJURED BY AUTOS

Two men were in Suburban General Hospital today suffering injuries received in an automobile collision in Ohio River boulevard, Bellevue, late yesterday.

Edward Knuth, 40, of 858 Rothpletz street, received a fractured hip when an automobile which he was driving collided, police say, with a machine driven by A. A. Bowdle Dixmont, near Grant avenue. A companion, Joseph Speck, 40, received a fractured leg and two fractured ribs. C. P. Madden, 30, 14 Haberman street, a passenger, was treated for minor injuries and lodged in Bellevue jail.

Following the accident, Knuth was arrested, police say, on a charge of driving while intoxicated. His two companions were held as material witnesses. Bowdle and E. J. Zimmerman, 45 Courlney street, Emsworth, a passenger, were given first aid and released on their own recognizance.

Struck by an automobile as they crossed South Eighteenth street at Monastery avenue last night, John Weist, of 1234 Evergreen road, and Robert Beett, of 117 Shoup street, were cut and bruised. They were treated at the South Side Hospital. Police arrested D. Henry Davis, of Craighead street, said to be the driver of the car.

WAGE DISPUTE SNAGS COUNTY AIRPORT

Union Chiefs Say Bidders Cut Pay; New Proposals To Guard Labor Rates

Allegheny County's $2,500,000 airport struck another snag today with the Commissioners' rejection of all bids submitted last Tuesday for construction of hangar, administration building and auxiliary building on complaint of labor leaders that low bidders were not paying union wage scales. The engineers' estimate for the erection and completion of the buildings is $225,000.

R. H. Cunningham and Sons Company was low bidder on the general construction work at $165,814. Ortale Construction Company was next low with $168,396. A spokesman for the Cunningham concern told the commissioners that 85 per cent of the general construction work would be sublet to contractors paying prevailing wage scales and the remaining 15 per cent of the work would employ concrete workers and carpenters at the existing scale.

P. J. Dagnall, representative of the Building Trades Council of Pittsburgh, contradicted the spokesman, asserting that the Cunningham company had cut wages in half on other jobs.

The County Commissioners unanimously adopted a resolution rejecting all bids on airport buildings and agreed to insert a clause in the next advertisement to the effect that "all contractors shall employ only first-class mechanics and artisans and pay the prevailing wage scale."

22, were responsible for his arrest Saturday afternoon. Little George's remark to his mother that he had seen his father and Betty together, repeated to police by the wife, resulted in Starchok's arrest.

Although questioned continually for hours he claimed innocence, and it was not until last night when confronted by the girl's father in the undertaking establishment, where the body had been taken, that he changed his story.

CHILD VANISHES

George Andrews, a boarder in the Starchok home, and Albert Potter, said to be a companion of Starchok, also are being held for questioning. No formal charge has been lodged against them.

Starchok called Friday afternoon at the home of Jack Mowrey, 431 Chestnut street, where he was always welcomed by the Mowreys who had befriended him. There he talked to Betty and invited her to visit his little son.

A few hours later Mrs. Alice Mowrey sent Betty to call her brothers, Jack, 10, and Joseph, 8. After calling the boys, Betty continued on to the Starchok home, police say.

The body, the head beaten with an ax, was covered with a burlap bag. It was removed to the funeral parlors of Carl E. Davis, where an autopsy was to be performed today. Coroner Annie Swabb declared there would be no inquest.

NUT, BOLT BODY DISSOLVED BY COURT

Judge Holds Association Here Violates Trust Law; New Organization Planned

NEW YORK, March 17.—(AP.)—Federal Judge Frank J. Coleman today ordered the dissolution of Bolt, Nut and Rivet Manufacturers' Association, controlling about 95 per cent of the industry, holding that it was in restraint of trade and a violation of the Sherman anti-trust laws.

Counsel for the association, doing an annual business of approximately $75,000,000, agreed to the issuance of the order. The decree forbids all preferential lists of customers and requires each member of the association to fix its own prices.

HEADQUARTERS HERE

The Bethlehem Steel Corporation, Republic Steel and Pittsburgh Screw and Bolt Company are among the 50 members of the association which has its headquarters in Pittsburgh. They were named as defendants by the government together with Charles J. Graham, Pittsburgh, president of the trade association; E. Harmon Friel, of A. and M. Hayden, of Philadelphia, and John C. Korfick, of the Kortick Manufacturing Company of San Francisco.

Other members of the association affected by the dissolution decree include: Erie Bolt and Nut Company, Erie, Pa.; Neely Nut and Bolt Company, Pittsburgh; Oliver Iron and Steel Corporation, Pittsburgh.

PLAN NEW BODY

Mr. Graham announced that while the association was ordered dissolved as a price fixing body in restraint of trade, the members proposed to form a new trade association which would conform to federal laws. He said the government had granted permission for the organization of such an association.

The association was formed in 1925 when the industry was losing approximately $3,000,000 a year, according to the officers, and had turned the loss into a profit which last year amounted to $7,000,000.

DUNLAP URGES PLAY DEVICES

Permission to advertise for contracts on playgrounds equipment, an automobile truck for Mayview and three trucks for the Bureau of Highways and Sewers, has been requested by Col. W. R. Price of the truck for Mayview is not to exceed $1,000, and the three trucks for the Highways and Sewers Bureau, $9,500.

Equipment asked for playgrounds included 200 chair reel swings, $5.40 each, estimated; 36 iron swing frames, $33 each; 25 kindergarten slides, $28.80 each, 4 stairs sets, $157 each and 4 sets steps, $65 each.

Weather Conditions.

The Atlantic Coast low is centered off the Middle Atlantic Coast this morning, lowest barometer reported, 29.88 inches, at Atlantic City. It is producing rain or snow from Virginia northward and as far west as the Upper Ohio Valley states. The western low pressure areas are concentrating over the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains with only light scattered snows and cloudiness.

The high pressure area separating the eastern and western lows is diminishing in strength as it advances eastward. It stretches from Eastern Ontario southward over the Ohio Valley states to the Gulf. The temperature changes were unimportant except over the southern states, where it is colder than yesterday, with frost everywhere east of Texas and as far south as Tampa.

River Conditions.

The Allegheny and the Ohio rivers are stationary, the Monongahela is falling. Stage at Franklin is 1.9 feet. Lock No. 7, 13.6; Pittsburgh, 12.1; Dam No. 4, 10.2; Dam No. 6, 9.1; Dam No. 10, 10.4, and Dam No. 13, 8.4. The rivers will change but little.

GEORGIA GRAY

DENY VICE PLOT IN GIRL'S DEATH

NEW YORK, March 17.—(AP.)—Authorities today denied there was foul play in the death of a second woman vice-graft witness.

Miss Lucia Dickens, red-haired girl who danced under the name Georgia Gray, died Saturday night in Bellevue Hospital after an illness of four days. Though the cause originally was diagnosed as pneumonia, Dr. Charles Norris, chief medical examiner, ordered a chemical analysis of the organs to determine whether they contained poison.

Another "lead" in the Vivian Gordon murder mystery dissolved into thin air today. A man who named to police two men he said committed the murder broke down and admitted he concocted the story in the hope of selling it to newspapers.

Proxy Offers Byrd Sesqui Invitation

HARRISBURG, March 17.—(AP.)—A joint session of the Legislature planned for today to hear former Gov. Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, ask Pennsylvania to participate in the sesqui-centennial of the surrender of Yorktown next October, was canceled today when Byrd was unable to attend because of an engagement to meet his brother, Admiral Richard E. Byrd, at Richmond.

The Rev. Dr. W. A. R. Goodwin, president of the Yorktown Sesqui-Centennial Association, came in his place and delivered his message to Gov. Pinchot in the executive offices.

PRISON FAKE EVIDENCE OPENS

Coast Guardsmen Testify Against Attorney, Others In Erie Substitution Case

ERIE, Pa., March 17.—Coast guardsmen today testified against Attorney Samuel Y. Rossiter when testimony was begun in the trial of Rossiter and two others charged with conspiracy in the substitution of James Patrone for another man sentenced to the Erie County Jail for smuggling liquor. Rossiter was declared to have been present at the preliminary hearing of the men arrested for rum running.

The first witness called by the government was a Coast Guardsman, William Earl Peterson. During the direct examination, Attorney Al W. Thomas, of Meadville, defense counsel, objected frequently.

TELLS OF CAPTURE

Peterson testified concerning the capture of a boat smuggling liquor in September, 1929. On the boat, he said, were two men, one of whom said he was Joseph Jarvis. The other said his name was Black, Peterson testified.

The government claims that the man arrested as Joseph Jarvis was Stanley Wells, of Colburg, Ont., and that Patrone, a resident of Buffalo, N. Y., went to jail to serve at 60-day sentence for him. Attorney Rossiter, Sam Beals and Joseph Donovan, Erie automobile salesman, are accused of conspiring to make the substitution possible.

Reviewing the indictment, James I. Marsh, assistant United States district attorney, said one of the counts in the indictment involved the bond posted for the alleged liquor runners. He said $4,000 cash bond was posted for the man known as Jarvis, and when Patrone went to jail the bond was returned to the bondsmen. He said a false claim was made in asking surrender of the bond.

OFFERED $1,000

Peterson testified that when the Coast Guardsmen made the arrest, "Jarvis" showed him a roll of currency, and from it drew $1,000 and offered to give it to him if he released the prisoners. Peterson said there was about $4,800 in the roll.

The Coast Guardsman said he saw Attorney Rossiter at the preliminary hearing given the prisoners on October 4. He was informed, he said, that the two men, "Jarvis" and Beals, alias Black, had waived preliminary hearings and were held for court.

The prosecutor asked Peterson if he saw in the court room the man he had seen in jail serving the 60-day sentence. The witness pointed to Patrone. The latter pleaded guilty last Saturday to the charges against him.

Other Coast Guardsmen and prohibition agents followed Peterson on the stand and gave testimony substantially the same as his concerning the capture of the rum running boat and the subsequent arraignment of the men arrested under the names of Jarvis and Black.

Several of the witnesses pointed out Beals as the man who had said he was Black, and said they did not see "Jarvis" in the courtroom. They also corroborated Peterson's testimony that Attorney Rossiter was present at the arraignment of the men before the United States commissioner.

The witnesses were C. D. Holdren, coast guardsman; H. W. Morris, customs inspector; Parke R. McCandless, prohibition agent; H. S. Armor, special investigator, and I. M. McCurdy, prohibition agent.

Coolidge Calls Ireland Land of Hope, Progress

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., March 17.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

The seventeenth day of March is celebrated by those who cherish the Emerald Isle as the place of their ancestral origin. Millions of devoted men and women wear some green emblem in honor of Saint Patrick, the patron saint of Ireland. If his life is shrouded somewhat in mystery that only makes him the more fascinating. He is the personification of the Christian influence that came into the life of the Irish people.

Mr. Coolidge

Considering the large contributions that the Irish race has made to the freedom and progress of so many foreign lands it must be a great satisfaction to see Ireland, after a long struggle, at last peaceful and self-governing. The effort and energy that had been expended in generations of political agitation and strife have been turned into constructive purposes. The country is being restored. Education is fostered, industries are coming into existence. The River Shannon has been harnessed to furnish light and power for the whole Irish Free State. The railroad system has been unified. While there still remain economic problems and domestic differences, Ireland, no longer a prey to despair, is a land of hope and progress.

VIKING CREW ON AN ICE FLOE DURING FILMING OF A RECENT PART OF THE MOVIE SOUND FILM THEY HAD PLANNED

when the Viking blew up, were believed to have lost their lives when they lost their footing and slipped into the turbulent Arctic waters between fissures in the shifting floes.

Among those brought to safety was Capt. Abram Kean, Jr., skipper of the Viking. On duty on the bridge at the time of the blast, he was hurled 12 feet by the force of the explosion. Badly injured when he was sent sprawling on the ice, Capt. Kean was half-carried, half-dragged to Horse Island by members of his gallant crew.

25 UNACCOUNTED FOR

In addition to the 118 rescued, seven other members of the personnel have been accounted for. Five of this number, all believed seriously injured, were sighted drifting in a small dory about five miles off Horse Island. Two others were seen this morning struggling toward land over the dangerously-moving ice.

This left 25 unaccounted for, as the Viking carried a total of 150 on her ill-fated cruise. Survivors reported 20 known dead, most of them terribly mutilated by the blast. This left a margin of five. Whether this last little group was huddled, perhaps gravely injured, shielded from the wind behind an ice hummock awaiting the arrival of rescuers, or whether all had slipped to icy graves beneath the white-caked waters of the bay could not be conjectured.

The survivors knew nothing of the fate of Frissell, Sargent and Penrod. They believed most of the dead bodies they had seen were those of members of the crew, but admitted that the damage wrought to these human frames by the force of the blast had in some cases made identification difficult if not impossible. Tales were told of headless, limbless bodies lying sprawled upon the ice where the sudden explosion had catapulted them.

SHIPS AID RESCUE

The explosion is believed to have occurred in the powder magazine, directly below the officers' quarters. It was in this compartment that the motion picture men made their quarters also. Even the most sanguine were unable to hope that the three cinematographic adventurers had escaped unscathed.

In the meantime, tugs and ice-breakers fought their way through the choked northern waters in an effort to reach whatever survivors may still be struggling against the elements to retain their hold on life. Efforts are being made to reach the two stragglers sighted many miles off shore by Horse Island watchers. The survivors, thankful over their own salvation, joined in prayers for their rescue.

Obviously weakened after their nightlong trek over the hazardous ice, it seemed that only a miracle would enable them to reach land in safety.

INJURED FIND REST

One by one and in groups of twos and threes, the 118 survivors straggled ashore, finding ready arms to greet them and hot drinks to revive their sorely tried spirits and harrassed bodies. The 15 or 20 inhabitants of Horse Island, one of the northernmost outposts of Newfoundland, labored without rest to give aid to the injured and comfort to the weary.

According to the bits of information gathered from the incoherent survivors, among whom were reported two boy stowaways, an explosion of 400 pounds of gunpowder stored aft and used to blast away ice tore that part of the 154-foot vessel to fragments. The ship then caught fire and burned to the water's edge, driving injured and uninjured out upon the precarious floes. This occurred about 9 p. m. Sunday.

Under ordinary circumstances these veteran sealers would have skipped from ice pan to ice pan as easily as the average townsman darts in and out of city traffic, but loose spring ice and a heavy sea made the going doubly hazardous. Some of the floes finally drifted inland, but the contrary wind continued to push most of them seaward.

RADIO MAN HERO OF SHIP BLAST

ST. JOHNS, N. F., March 17.—(INS.)—Otis Bartlett, 31, the unromantic, matter-of-fact lone radio operator on Horse Island, scene of the Viking sea tragedy, probably was surprised today to learn that he was reported to be a romantic lady operator.

This was revealed today when portions of a newspaper story appearing in New York newspapers were cabled here, asking for confirmation and, if possible, interviews with the lady wireless operator.

Barlett assured the outside world that he is a man, and has proved himself very much a man by the manner in which he has stood by his transmitting key for more than 48 hours, constantly sending news to the outside world of the Viking tragedy.

CONVICTS FIGHT, 5 INJURED

JOLIET, Ill., March 17.—(AP.)—Five men were injured today in a quarrel among 16 convicts in the band room at the new penitentiary at Stateville, across the river from the old prison, in which a riot broke out Saturday.

No guards were present at the time. The cause of the argument was not learned.

The convicts beat each other with clubs. Five were sent to a hospital.

Deputy Warden Frank Kneff said he had been warned that the chair factory in the new prison was to be bombed at 10 a. m. Extra guards were posted, and the attack did not materialize.

HONESDALE, Pa., March 17.—(AP.)—Charles L. Hoover Set for Voyage To Caribbean Tomorrow

By GEORGE E. DURNO
International News Service

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Taking advantage of civilization's swiftest mode of transportation, the airplane, Col. E. W. Starling, assistant chief of the White House secret service, hopped off from Miami early today to fly to Porto Rico and the Virgin Islands where he will make advance arrangements for President Hoover's visit. He had journeyed overnight by train to Florida to make connections with the regular passenger airplane of the Pan-American Line. It was his first experience in the air.

Meanwhile, word came up from Norfolk that the battleship Arizona, which will take Mr. Hoover and his party on the 10-day cruise through southern waters, was ready to sail. The President will leave here tomorrow evening by special train for the Virginia naval base and Thursday morning early the big dreadnaught will weigh anchor.

The first port of call will be San Juan, Porto Rico. The President plans to spend two days and a night there, conferring with Gov. Gen. Theodore Roosevelt over economic and social problems confronting the island. A motor trip across Porto Rico also is planned.

From San Juan, the Arizona will cruise to St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, famous for the manufacture of bay rum. Mr. Hoover will spend only a day there. Paul Pearson, the new governor and first civilian executive under the recent order which transferred the islands from the Navy to the Interior Department, has only just arrived himself. Then, the big fighting ship will turn northward again and steam leisurely to Norfolk to complete a 10-day cruise.

BEAUTY'S HOPE FOR BAIL FADES

By BARON GEORGE WRANGEL
Universal Service

NICE, France, March 17.—Hope of winning Mrs. Fred G. Nixon-Nirdlinger's release on bail, pending trial for the killing of her husband, is slight today, her attorney, Louis Gassin, confessed.

Gassin explained that Magistrate Vashier, before whom the pretty young widow will be arraigned tomorrow, will be forced to hold his client for the August assizes without bail, unless police are willing to accept her plea of self-defense. There is small chance of this, he admitted, since there is no witness to the shooting.

Meanwhile, with the body of her husband en route homeward aboard the SS. Providence, Mrs. Nixon-Nirdlinger appeared reconciled to the long imprisonment that confronts her. Realization that her two young children are being well cared for at the villa where the slaying occurred Thursday night has done much to comfort here.

JURORS PICKED IN LINGLE CASE

CHICAGO, March 17.—(AP.)—Alert and interested in every detail of his case, Leo V. Brothers, St. Louis gangster, watched as the state proceeded with its efforts to get a jury qualified to send him to the electric chair if deemed necessary for the slaying of Alfred (Jake) Lingle, Chicago Tribune reporter.

None of the prospective jurors questioned yesterday by Assistant State's Attorney C. Wyaland Brooks gave indication of any scruples against sending the defendant to the chair.

Three jurors had been tentatively accepted by both the state and the defense when court was opened today.

Meanwhile copies of a piece entitled "All My Days Are Wasted Away," with words and music by the accused St. Louis man, were sold outside the courtroom. There was a big crowd on hand and business was good.

GUARDS SHOOT IN LABOR WAR

ST. LOUIS, March 17.—(AP.)—About 100 men armed with shot guns and revolvers ambushed six guards of the Phillips Pipeline Company today as they drove along a Hog Haven road to escort laborers to the tanks of the company, and wounded four of the guards in a gun battle.

The attack was attributed to labor troubles, as the tanks of the pipeline company are being erected by the Chicago Bridge and Iron Company under an "open shop" policy.

As the guards—all special deputy sheriffs, traveling in three automobiles, about 100 yards apart—entered a ravine between two railroad embankments, about 25 automobiles appeared from a side road and opened fire.

Wilkins Arctic Submarine Quits Berth, Heads for Sea in Snowstorm

By CAPT. SIR HUBERT WILKINS

Commander of the Wilkins-Ellsworth Trans-Arctic Submarine Expedition, which will go from Spitzbergen under the Arctic ice to Alaska by way of the North Pole.

PHILADELPHIA, March 17.—Under her own power, for the first time since she was turned over to the expedition, the reconditioned O-12, now the Nautilus, backed out of her Camden (N. J.) berth yesterday afternoon and headed down the Delaware River.

Sir Hubert

A blanket of snow and thick weather made piloting difficult, and the submarine put into the Navy Yard at Philadelphia for the night. There was no clanging of bells, no rolling of drums as she backed from her berth. The steam whistles on tugboats screeched shrilly and the sirens of the steamers moaned a salute as the submarine swung into the stream.

CHILL WEATHER

There was strict silence on board, except for the sharp orders of the square-jawed, ex-Navy Skipper Sloane Dannenhower.

Heavy snow fell as we moved from the dock. The weather was piercing cold to us, dressed as we were in ordinary business clothes—as cold as any weather we will find on our Arctic cruise—and this made the task of moving difficult.

The few last articles required on board had been collected on the deck and were thrown on board in the drenching rain. The vessel was moved at noon to a berth from which she could leave at any tide, and as soon as the equipment was stowed below Dannenhower gave the orders to cast off the shore line, and we were on the way.

SKIPPER EFFICIENT

Lieutenant Commander Sloane Dannenhower has inspired in his crew of experts a prompt action, immediate response to orders and loyalty that augers well for the expedition.

I was more than pleased with the ability exhibited by the skipper and his crew on this first run.

There still is much to be done on board, and many of the new parts to test. But, with the knowledge gained by experience, Capt. Dannenhower advised putting out from the shipyard, so that the last few jobs could be shaken down under way.

The ship will proceed to the oil docks at Marcus Hook, where sufficient fuel for the cruise to Brooklyn Navy Yard will be taken on board, and soon she will put out to sea.

TOWN HALL SITE BRANDED 'WART'

Objection to the Nicola site for the Town Hall by a group of Masons was answered today by Commissioner E. V. Babcock, who expressed a hope that he would not live long enough to see it operated as a "menace" to Pittsburgh.

Speakers representing Syria Temple and the Masonic Fund Association had previously raised the objection that the Town Hall, through its proposed use for hockey games and other sport contests, would attract an "undesirable element" and would "constitute a menace to the neighborhood."

They declared:

"It will be a neighborhood of hot dog and peanut stands."

Charles E. Schuetz, representing the Masonic Fund Association, said:

CALLED 'WART'

"Why Nicola has built up such a beautiful garden in this Schenley district and why he now wants to put a wart on it is beyond my understanding."

Another serious objection raised to the proposed Fifth avenue site is the traffic congestion problem.

J. E. Lewis, president of the Masonic Fund Association, pointed out that at much less expense the old Exposition Building at the Point could be remodeled to meet all the needs of a town hall.

Others appearing with the Masonic groups included Dr. Thomas M. Herd, Jr., potentate of Syria Temple; Fred A. Fichtel, past potentate, and the following representing the Masonic Fund Association: Harry E. McLain, James W. Barber, Fred Henninger and James H. Lytle.

BABCOCK DEFENDS

Babcock in answer to the objections raised by the group said:

"The town hall has been hanging over the heads of the county commissioners for two years, after having been ordered by a large majority of the people.

"No matter what site has been proposed, there have been serious objections. Personally, I think there is only one court of St. James in Pittsburgh, and that is the site selected."

Lighthouse Keeper's Death Investigated

WASHINGTON, March 17.—(AP.)—Investigator J. L. Geraghty has been dispatched by the Justice Department to inquire into the strange death of Ullman Owens, keeper of the lonely Holland Bar Lighthouse in Chesapeake Bay.

A coroner's jury found death was due to natural causes, but when the lighthousekeeper's body was found in his home it was bruised and furniture had been overturned. Owens death was discovered when the Holland Bar light failed to burn.

Hitch Hiker Slayer Enters State Prison

Mrs. Moskowitz Sees Rum As Issue, Mum on Smith

Prohibition and economic problems will be the two major issues in the coming presidential election, in the opinion of Mrs. Henry Moskowitz, of New York, friend and political advisor of Al Smith, Democratic chieftain.

On the subject of Al Smith's political future, Mrs. Moskowitz, who is to speak tonight in the Y. M. and Y. W. H. A. Building in Bellefield avenue, was silent.

She scored the Eighteenth Amendment, saying:

"I am an advocate of temperance, but prohibition does not encourage temperance. It has forced abstinence for people who cannot afford to pay the price today. Others are forced to purchase poisonous liquors. Prohibition has created a taste for liquor among the people."

Mrs. Moskowitz believes the Eighteenth Amendment will be amended. She said:

"One good thing has come from prohibition—it has banished the saloon, and whatever comes with modification of the prohibition amendment the saloon will not return."

Mrs. Moskowitz was entertained by Mrs. Carroll Miller at her home at 4 Von Lent street, at breakfast upon her arrival here this morning.

PENALTY IN CITY BUYING CASE DISCUSSED

Punishment Topic as Board Of Trade Backs Demand For Inquiry by Council

Possible punishment which might be made in the cases of the officials found guilty in the present investigation of alleged illegalities occurring in the purchase of supplies for the city of Pittsburgh were discussed by Attorney Elverton H. Wicks at a meeting of the Washington Heights Board of Trade last night.

The only punishment provided in the act of 1911 for the wanton waste of funds provided for the purchase of city supplies is removal from office, he said. He cited the English common law, which in a modified form constitutes a part of the law of the State of Pennsylvania, and which provides fine or imprisonment for offenses where no punishment has been named, and said this would form the basis for punishment in the present case, he said.

"It is your money that these politicians are squandering. Therefore it is your duty to see that the money is properly collected and properly expended."

REQUEST INQUIRY

The board went on record as having unanimously passed a motion that the City Council make a careful investigation of the present system of purchasing supplies.

Property owners of the Mt. Washington district, it was brought out, have obtained a reduction in tax assessments recently to the extent of almost $150,000. Most of the reductions were obtained through the efforts of the board, and especially through the work of R. J. Macrory, president, and Attorney Wicks, who represented the property owners.

BACKS COMMITTEE

The Squirrel Hill Board of Trade last night voted to refrain from joining other civic bodies in aiding the private investigation into the Department of Supplies but approved a resolution to support the Citizens' Committee now making an audit of the department books. The meeting was held in the Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church.

The vote was taken on a resolution offered by E. E. Hauck, who asked that the body go on record as supporting the Citizens' Committee. Much discussion preceded the vote, which was ordered to be a standing vote by Thomas O. Hasley, the president.

Judge D. Paulson Foster of the County Court addressed the board, describing the operation of Juvenile Court.

ATTORNEY CITES ILLEGAL BUYING

charges made against his department, also will be considered. Both papers were introduced in Council yesterday.

Max Parker, who does much remodeling work for the city on jobs authorized by City Council, was a loyal supporter of Mayor Charles H. Kline in the 1929 campaign.

His name appears along with the names of many political leaders, councilmen and heads of city departments in the list of contributors to the "Real Regular Republican Organization" filed with the clerk of courts. Max Parker is down for $150 and M. Parker for $500.

PARKER REMEMBERED

When emergency work came up, calling for speedy action without bids, Parker was not forgotten, records show. He got the remodeling job in the Central Police Station, totaling $4,294.27.

Council voted 6 to 3 to pay him for that job without waiting for the opinion of the city solicitor on the legality of the payment.

When booths were to be built in the City-County Building corridor to let the taxpayers know where to pay their bills another emergency arose.

Parker was given the job of erecting 31 counters and 31 electric signs for the wards of Pittsburgh. This job amounted to $5,225. No bids were taken, according to officials in the controller's office.

Richard K. Neff, city architect, who handled this work, said that to hold up for bids would have delayed tax collections.

Parker last June also received $1,013 for repairing the city clerk's office. Of this amount $425 was on contract for a new doorway and $588 was for extra work in remodeling a lavatory.

Marines Resume Recruiting Here

After having been discontinued for four months, recruiting has been resumed at the local Marine Corps recruiting station at the Federal Building, Maj. William S. Harrison, officer in charge, said today. Men between the ages of 19 and 30 are wanted, Maj. Harrison said. Those accepted will be sent to Parris Island, S. C., for training.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., March 17.—(AP)—A supplemental budget, containing among other items a recommended biennial appropriation of $2,500,000 for state aid to schools was submitted to the Legislature today by the State Budget Commission. The state aid under the commission's recommendations would be apportioned $1,000,000 for 1931 and $1,250,000 for 1932.

Hearing Scheduled On Firearms Bill

HARRISBURG, March 17.—(AP)—Representative McClure, Allegheny, chairman of the House Committee on Judiciary general, announced a public hearing will be held Tuesday, March 24, on the firearms bill sponsored by Representative Witkin, Philadelphia, to regulate sale, possession and carrying of firearms.

1,000 OPEN WAR ON BLUE LAWS

MINISTER SPEAKS

Among the Pittsburghers to speak against the blue laws were the Rev. Frank Smith, of the First Unitarian Church of Pittsburgh; Mrs. George P. Bassett, Jr., vice president of the Association for the Modification of the Blue Laws of 1794, former Gov. John K. Tener, spokesman for the sportsmen, and William S. Haddock, representative of the Chamber of Commerce.

Wilmer M. Jacoby, an official of the Association for the Modification of the Blue Laws was on hand to watch the proceedings.

As the committee went into session in the House chamber, Mrs. Bassett pointed out that the Musmanno bill providing local option recognizes that one community shall not impose its will upon another. She said:

"We represent all classes of citizens who are rather terrified by non-observance of law. The blue laws have been nullified by our people. We wish to have the blue laws replaced by laws which would be a universal duty and privilege and desire to obey. We seek relief from the abuses and hypocrisies that modern conditions have forced into our Sunday life."

MUSMANNO CHEERED

The House chamber was packed to capacity and there were several hundred standing as the hearing opened.

Representative Musmanno was given a hearty ovation when he appeared in the chamber. In introducing his bill, Musmanno, realizing the committee's anticipated opposition to the bill, said:

"Will you give the House of Representatives the opportunity to vote on this bill or will you choke it in committee?"

CITY MANAGER FOES SILENT

No champion to foster the cause of the present form of municipal government had been found today by the Civic Club of Allegheny County for its forum Thursday upon the merits of the proposed city manager plan.

Mayor Charles H. Kline was inaccessible to those who sought him to ask if he would defend city government as it is practiced in Pittsburgh today and John S. Herron, president of City Council, wouldn't talk about it.

Walter J. Millard, of the National Municipal League, will discuss the merits of the bill at the forum.

Meanwhile sentiment favorable to the measure which comes up in the Municipal Affairs Committee of the House of Representatives at Harrisburg for a public hearing next week continues to grow. Attorney A. Leo Weil, vice president of the National Municipal League, was to talk on the operation of the plan in 400 cities before members of the Municipal Affairs Committee of the Chamber of Commerce at noon today.

P. R. T. FEES UP IN SENATE QUIZ

HARRISBURG, March 17.—(AP)—The Senate committee investigation of public utilities continued today with Coleman T. Joyce and W. K. Myers, an official of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit, as witnesses. The committee desires to question both concerning the moneys paid in 1919 to 1927 by P. R. T. to Joyce, the company's counsel in that period. He is now vice preident and counsel for Mitten management.

Prior to his employment by P. R. T., Joyce was chief of the Public Service Commission's accounting bureau.

The charges of John Farr, of Scranton, of collusion between Wall street and the Public Service Commission evaporated in yesterday's session.

Farr produced a copy of a letter from an unnamed Wall street firm to an unnamed Scranton bank. It was read into the record. The committee concurred, in a statement that the letter did not substantiate Farr's charges and Farr was excused.

Mrs. Pinchot Scores Earnest in Utilities

HARRISBURG, March 17.—(AP)—Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the Governor, told a radio audience today that Senator William H. Earnest, of Dauphin, is "far more interested in helping out the big utility companies to exploit the people than he is in doing his duty by the men and women who elected him."

Mrs. Pinchot made her attack on the Dauphin senator, who is chairman of the Senate committee investigating the Public Service Commission, at the conclusion of a talk devoted to criticism of public utility rates charged in Pennsylvania.

ASSEMBLY GETS NEW METRO PLAN BILL

Coyne Measure Would Unite County Municipalities as One City by Majority Vote

HARRISBURG, March 17.—The consolidation of the municipalities of Allegheny County into a city and county to be known as the "City of Pittsburgh" was submitted to the Legislature last night by Senator James J. Coyne. The present city would get another name.

Written in the form of a joint resolution the measure would provide for a charter to be submitted to the people at a special or general election, adding:

"If the majority of the electors voting thereon in the county as a whole and at least a majority of the cities, boroughs and townships vote in the affirmative, the act shall take effect for the whole county."

NEW CHARTER BASIS

The bill lays the basis for a new metropolitan charter, and provides that if rejected, it may be resubmitted by the county commissioners in a new or modified form.

Other of its charter provisions include:

The election of a board of county commissioners by the electors of the consolidated city for the reorganization of all courts except the common pleas; consolidation of assets, property and liabilities; powers of assessing, collecting taxes; zoning; incurring debt; municipal improvements, and other capacities now in county and city charters.

POWERS RESERVED

It also reserves substantial powers to the cities, boroughs and townships, the charter to provide for continued existence of these as municipal divisions, including constitutional and legal capacity of municipal corporations; power to levy and collect taxes; power to get and own, use and improve all kinds of public property, and works; power to maintain and have local police and fire departments.

It provides, however, that a division may surrender by a majority vote any of its powers to the consolidated city, subject to acceptance by the Board of Commissioners.

In no way would it amend existing powers of cities or other municipalities.

MOTHERS' FUND BILL REPORTED

A mothers' pension appropriation sufficient to provide aid for all mothers and families on the waiting lists of mothers' assistance boards in Pennsylvania is promised in Senator Frank J. Harris' bill, reported out by the Senate appropriation committee at Harrisburg today.

In a telegram to the Mothers' Pension League of Allegheny County Senator Harris said the committee approved the appropriation of $4,115,938, this being the full amount asked.

The money would be appropriated for the state for the biennium of 1931-1933, and a similar amount would be appropriated pro rata by the various counties.

Senator Harris said that the action of the committee would be good news to thousands of widows who have been on the waiting lists for a year or more.

Gov. Pinchot, who is honorary president of the Mothers' Pension League, has indicated his approval of an appropriation sufficient to care for all the families on the waiting list, and a recent canvass of the members of the Legislature shows that the great majority of the senators and representatives are in sympathy with the movement.

Man, Girls Quarrel, Riot Call Turned In

A riot call received by police at the Center avenue station turned out to be nothing more than an early morning quarrel between a young man and two young women he was taking home, police said. The three were arrested on suspicious person charges and were to have a hearing in Morals Court.

At the Center avenue station they said they were Miss Betty Moore, 17, of Fifth avenue and Jumonville street; Miss Ruth Lowell, 18, of 18 Seneca street, and John McElwee, 29, of 1133 Dohrman avenue, West Park.

Proposes State Dry Enforcement Quiz

HARRISBURG, March 17.—(AP)—A resolution to have a joint committee of the Senate and House investigate the administration of the Snyder-Armstrong prohibition enforcement act was offered in the House last night by Representative Beyer, Philadelphia.

The committee would inquire whether the law is being violated in any county and to what extent. It would seek to learn the names of offending persons and corporations.

Minister Cleared In R-100 Disaster

LONDON, March 17.—(Universal)—Lord Thomson of the air ministry will be exonerated of blame for the cause of the dirigible R-100 disaster, in which he died, according to this morning's Daily Herald.

The newspaper learns that the court of inquiry's report, to be published in a few weeks, attributes the disaster to the loss of gas in the front bags following a tear in the upper cover.

Poison Traces Gang In Hindu Slaying

SACRAMENTO, Cal., March 17.—(AP)—Finding of poison and a blood-stained saw in a Yuba County ranch hut led officers today to express the opinion it was once the rendezvous of an Oriental gang accused in the slaying of 14 Hindus since 1927.

The hut was found yesterday by officers seeking clues to the slaying of San Ram Pande, young university student and investigator.

Gangster Suspects Flee Detroit Police

DETROIT, March 17.—(INS)—Two alleged New York gangsters handcuffed together, slugged a patrolman who was taking them from county jail to Recorder's Court today and escaped through crowds entering the courthouse for the Gerald Buckley trial.

The bandits, wanted for a $7,500 New York City restaurant holdup, were to have been arraigned in court today on a fugitive from justice warrant.

Girl Leads Bandits, Foiled at Bank

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., March 17.—(INS)—Three youthful bandits, accompanied by a young woman companion, staged an unsuccessful attempt to hold up the White Haven Savings Bank, at White Haven, about 30 miles from here, today were frightened by the interference of a White Haven merchant, and fled in a large automobile without obtaining a cent of loot.

Driver Badly Beaten In Hosiery Strike

PHILADELPHIA, March 17.—(AP)—Joseph Connelli, 26, of Camden, N. J., was in a serious condition today suffering from injuries received when he was beaten during hosiery mill strike disorders here last night.

Connelli, driver of a truck carrying workers home from the Whitehall Knitting Mills, was en route to the mill when three men in an automobile forced his truck to the curb.

No More Special Blend Coffee

Because of the low price at which we can now sell My-Te-Good Coffee, we have discontinued the sale of our Special Blend Coffee.

Here's the REASON WHY

our new low price on My-Te-Good Coffee is possible and why we have quit selling our Special Blend:

All the Coffees Used in Our My-Te-Good Coffee Come From BRAZIL

Coffee, in Brazil, is in a highly chaotic condition—prices are demoralized, everything pertaining to coffee is topsy-turvy and fine Brazilian Coffee is actually being exported for less money than it costs to grow it.

Consequently, being a blend of fine Brazilian Coffees, My-Te-Good can now be sold by us at a price practically as low as that at which we can sell the lesser quality Special Blend, as Special Blend contained some coffee which does not come from Brazil.

Gauchos Not Much, U. S. Cowboy Says

NEW YORK, March 17.—(INS.)—South American cowboys, termed gauchos by the intelligentsia and the movies, are not much. At least so says F. W. James, a real American cowboy from Sheridan, Wyo., who is in New York today after a trip to Paraguay, where he went to inspect the famed gauchos. He said:

"They don't know how to use a rope. They have ropes about 90 feet long and they usually tangle up themselves while the cow goes scooting."

ACTRESS TELLS SECRET

Tells How to Darken Gray Hair With a Home-Made Mixture

Joicey Williams, the well-known American actress, recently made the following statement about gray hair, and how to darken it, with a home-made mixture:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will gradually darken gray, streaked or faded hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine."

These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

Dope Parties Draw Alma; She Becomes Friend of Gigolos

By ALMA RUBENS

CHAPTER XI.

I put my mother on the train for California, kissed her goodbye, grabbed the first taxi I could get, and rushed back to the hotel—weak and sick, shivering from head to foot, and wracked with the hideous pains of the poor wretch who has been too long without the daily dope.

I was too weak to go out looking for a peddler—I didn't want to see any of my dopey friends—I just wanted to sink out of the world, down and down into the dull stupor of oblivion.

I called [illegible] who by this time was my best friend when it came to supplying me with dope.

Miss Rubens

He was always obliging with cocaine. I don't know whether he used it himself or not but he always had plenty on hand. Some incompetent dentists, who have failed to make a place for themselves in their professions, eke out an existence by selling cocaine. They sell it to you cheap at first and gradually they raise the price till you are spending every penny you can get for the stuff.

Every penny that's just what I meant. You let the rent go, you wear your clothes, you even go without your meals or make-up; you mend stockings with runs in them and put the money for a new pair into—"dope."

Takes Overdose

I sent for my dentist the minute I got back into the hotel and it wasn't 10 minutes until he was with me with a big box of the little white powder that was going to pull me out of my depression and give me, for an hour or so, peace of mind and comparative comfort of body.

I took a good big sniff of the stuff, a little too big that time.

It sent me completely, starkstaring, raving mad!

My dentist stayed with me for fear I would jump out of the window and kill myself.

He called a regular doctor and obtained a morphine solution.

As soon as I had taken a shot of that I sank into a doped stupor.

When I woke I tried to pull myself together. I took the book of my part in Lady Chatterley's Lover, and tried and tried to learn the lines. No use.

I depressed my heart with morphine then I took cocaine to pull myself up, and then I took morphine again to quiet the terrible drums that beat in the place where my poor exhausted heart was supposed to be.

I tried my best to keep away from the dope parties.

I really wanted to learn my part, and have a chance to get back.

Back to Parties

But I was friendless and alone, and terribly blue. And finally I went back to the dope parties again.

There's no use of going into particulars about them—they were the same disgusting, degraded orgies.

Over and over, and over again.

At one of these so-called "parties," I met two little girls, not yet 16 years of age.

One of them was a beautiful child, as fair as an angel, with big blue innocent eyes. She told me she was put on the "stuff" by a boy friend, who gave her candy with dope in it. She said the boy friend got the doped candy from a peddler who was always hanging around the school house.

Poor little Alice, she was a confirmed dope fiend before she was 16.

She had quarreled with her boy friend and now she had to get the money for her dope any way she could.

I was so horrified at the sight of those two little girls in that terrible place that I went home early, and took Alice with me. I asked her where her father and mother thought she was, and she said that they thought she was spending the night with the other little girl.

The other girl's parents thought she was spending the night with Alice at her plain little home over in New Jersey.

I kept track of these two little girls for quite some time, and saw them sinking almost hour by hour deeper and deeper into the mire. They must be either hopeless waifs by now—if they are not lying dead in some Potter's field.

In the dope circle of New York I met a big politician from Washington, two editors, the principal owner of a big retail shop, a high city official and a greatly respected member of the judiciary.

Financier Host

One night I went to a party at the home of a world famous financier.

It was a Chinese party.

There was an altar, six feet square and three feet tall, in the middle of the room hung in rich black velvet.

A throne chair of gilded wood stood on the dais. In the chair sat a bronze Chinese idol, with blood red electric bulbs for eyes.

There was a canopy of black and gold, held by gold tassel cords, and somewhere hidden behind the velvet was a Chinese orchestra.

We doped, and drank and sniffed cocaine, and took long deep breaths of heroin.

The party lasted three days and three nights.

At the party I met my first professional Gigolo.

This Gigolo was the black sheep of one of the Knickerbocker New Yorkers.

He was the pet of a poor old woman, who paid him two hundred dollars a week to take her to a show every Wednesday night, and a night club on Saturday night.

This pitiful old creature showered the good-looking Gigolo with gifts worth thousands of dollars. The first night I met him, he showed me a magnificent ring she had just given him. It must have cost at least $500.

Joins Gigolos

I saw a good deal of Don that was the name we called the Gigolo, and the first thing I knew I was going round and round in a dizzy circle of Gigolos and their poor besotted victims.

New York is full of these Gigolos, and strange to say, they are often clever fellows, and they are always good looking, tastefully dressed and, of course, they must have good manners or they couldn't be Gigolos.

And yet over every one of the miserable, degraded creatures, some mother has hoped and prayed, and loved, and trusted.

Most of the Gigolos are dope fiends.

I suppose they drown their shame and humiliation in that way.

Mr. Mackenzie

While 10 committees are meeting simultaneously during the spring group meetings of the American Society for Testing Materials in the William Penn Hotel this week, the regional director of the Pittsburgh chapter will be host tomorrow. The regional meeting, followed by a dinner will be the only general session of the convention which opened yesterday and continues through Friday.

The general subject of "Welding" will be the topic tomorrow. K. G. Mackenzie, of New York, national president, will preside in the morning. F. M. Farmer, past president of that organization and of the American Welding Society which is co-operating in the sessions, will preside in the afternoon.

BURNED IN AUTO, MAN DIES

Burned about the body when his automobile caught fire in Highland Park, A. M. Bonn, 40, of 1008 Mirror street, died in Pittsburgh Hospital last night. Bonn was owner of the Perfect Window Shade Company. He was found rolling on the ground near his burning machine in Serpentine drive yesterday.

Bonn told those who found him that he was seated in his car and that he struck a match to light a cigaret. Flames shot up around his body and he tumbled from the car to the ground. Firemen from No. 8 Engine Company reported finding a gallon bottle partly filled with gasoline beside the car after the flames had been extinguished.

Guard Jail Holding Girl Attack Suspect

MARSHALL, Tex., March 17 (AP).—The Harrison County jail was under guard today to protect John Burke, 18, Negro, charged with attacking Miss Mary Young, 21, white. Two officers prevented the prisoner from falling into the hands of a group of men who sought to seize him yesterday when the Negro was taken to the Young home for the victim to view him. Deputy Sheriff Ellis Johnson covered the mob with his pistol, while Jailer Hamp Little drove the Negro back to jail.

5,000 Welsh Miners Quit in Cut Protest

CARDIFF, Wales, March 17—(AP).—Five thousand coal miners of South Wales quit work today in protest against a wage cut of 14 cents a day, awarded recently by the chairman of a joint conciliation board.

More Tourists Needed

just the type as traffic director for the seal fisheries of Alaska.

We concede that our big executives are overworked in their efforts to bring disorder out of chaos.

And most of them are traveling on their doctors' orders. They are too tender hearted to hang around and watch us suffer.

Quite a few others of our grand slams are skipping around the map. And they're making good time.

When you travel on your doctors' orders you can take it easy. But when you are traveling on your lawyers' orders you've got to go much faster.

Spotting stills by airplane is reversing the process.

The usual way is to take one swiggle of moonshine and then take off after a short run.

But it's going to improve the breed of parachute jumpers.

Bombing the stills will make no difference in the taste or quality.

The old government cavalry reports for duty in the morning to form in battle echelon and scout the Appalachians for forest fires. That's the real test of moonshine rum.

In fact, the hill-billies have been requested not to breathe on dry timber when returning from a barn dance.

It's spontaneous combustion in quart packages.

The bootlegging will retaliate against hostile airplanes by putting their stuff in anti-aircraft bottles.

Then when they wave it at the legal Zeppelins it has the same terrifying effect as a seven-ball Roman candle.

In this war everybody will want to be in the Q. M. department in order to have charge of bringing up supplies and taking away the empties.

We are now in the eleventh year of this equal struggle. There are heroes on both sides.

But unfortunately for the forces of law and disorder there has been too much fraternizing.

There has always been a question whether moonshine is run through a coil of pipe or whether the pipe is straight and the moonshine bends it.

We know it will twist the man who drinks it into a jigsaw puzzle. And we don't see how the government can win against outlaws who utilize liquid flame.

There are only two classes of enlistment in this war. First, you are a spy for both sides.

Then you take a drink and you're neutral.

WAR MEMORIAL MOVE DELAYED

Protest has been made to City Council against removal of a war memorial tablet from the Warrington Ave. Playground to McKinley Park.

In a petition a number of residents of the Warrington avenue section protested a previous petition, which advocated removal to the McKinley site.

It is likely that after a preliminary inspection, Council will set a date for a public hearing, when all interested in the matter can present their claims. The tablet is a memorial to soldiers of the Warrington avenue district who fought in the World War.

AD CLUB HEARS RADIO MEN

Representatives from Pittsburgh's radio broadcasting stations KDKA, WCAE, WJAS and KQV were to explain the various phases of broadcasting to members of the Pittsburgh Advertising Club at its luncheon in the William Penn Hotel today.

Four aspects of the new industry were to be discussed by the radio men, what radio is, coverage and audiences, programs, and results. In addition to the talks a musical program was to be presented by a saxophone trio from Station KDKA.

Slate Kills Miner; Son, Near Him, Uninjured

STEUBENVILLE, O., March 17. John Yurchco, 53, was crushed to death in a fall of slate at the Nicholson coal mine in Dillonvale late yesterday. His son John, 23, working near him, escaped uninjured.

Francis Brown, Jr., Advocates Lash

PHILADELPHIA, March 17.—(AP).—The whipping post was advocated as a cure for criminals by Judge Francis Shunk Brown, Jr., in Quarter Sessions Court, in sentencing to the Eastern Penitentiary five Negro youths who had admitted participation in 11 holdups. The court remarked:

"A few lashes would take some of the false bravado out of young holdups."

The defendants received sentences ranging from 18 months to 20 years.

PEAT MOSS

And you ask what is Peat Moss? Briefly, Peat Moss is pure organic matter. It decays to build up humus in the soil, but unlike manure, leaves or other common organic materials, it absorbs moisture and acts as a reservoir in feeding it steadily to the thirsty plant roots. Peat Moss is free from weed seeds, insects or fungus. It is clean, odorless and easy to work. Now is the time to prepare soil.

Question: Can you explain in simple language the mechanical design of Buick's Syncro-Mesh transmission?

Answer: Buick's Syncro-Mesh transmission is a device which causes two gears about to mesh to revolve at the same speed. This effect is obtained with two clutches. As the gear shift lever is moved from neutral it acts on one or the other of these clutches, causing the clutch to synchronize the two gears about to mesh. The gears are synchronized so quickly that, with no pause in the motion of shifting, the final movement is made while the gears are revolving at exactly the same speed. As a result, the teeth interlock quickly, easily, and silently.

Question: How does Syncro-Mesh enable one to shift more rapidly?

Answer: The time required for shifting gears is reduced by Syncro-Mesh, because one can shift instantaneously, easily, and silently.

Question: How does Syncro-Mesh transmission make driving in heavy traffic safer?

Answer: The outstanding value of Syncro-Mesh in traffic is the ability to shift silently and quickly from first to second, second to high, or from high back to second. This enables one to get maximum car speed under various driving conditions.

Question: Is it desirable to shift into second when stopping on slippery streets?

Answer: Yes. It should be remembered that the braking force of the engine is perfectly equalized on both rear wheels. Braking power applied in this manner reduces the tendency to skid on slippery roads. With Buick Syncro-Mesh transmission, it is a simple and easy matter to shift from high into second.

Question: How does Syncro-Mesh aid in driving downhill?

Answer: Experienced motorists use the braking power of their engines in descending long, steep hills. Naturally, the braking power exerted by the engine is much greater when the car is in second speed than when it is in high. When a grade turns out to be longer or steeper than is anticipated, it is frequently desirable to shift from high into second during the course of the descent. With Syncro-Mesh transmission, this is accomplished in a split second.

Question: How does Syncro-Mesh transmission make it easier to drive up steep hills?

Answer: There are times in driving up steep hills when a shift into second is absolutely necessary. With Syncro-Mesh transmission, this change can be made instantly. As a result, driving up steep grades is not only easier but also safer when the car is equipped with Syncro-Mesh transmission.

Question: Why is Buick Syncro-Mesh transmission an advantage in acceleration?

Answer: With Buick Syncro-Mesh, the driver is able to use the full speed range of his engine in both low and second speeds before going into high. In shifting from low to second or from second to high, the shift may be made rapidly without clashing, and therefore the full momentum of the car is maintained. As a result, the full accelerating possibilities of both low and second are employed and a lead of many yards is gained over traffic.

Syncro-Mesh

the new Thrill of the

NEW BUICK EIGHT

There is nothing so completely satisfying to most motorists as the smooth, silent shifting of gears. Silent gear-shifting is the mark of the expert driver—or, rather, it was, before Syncro-Mesh transmission came along to make experts of us all. Buick's Syncro-Mesh, an important feature of each of the four series of new Buick Eights, provides many other driving advantages including faster acceleration and greater safety. And, like the Buick Eight itself, it offers known reliability, established first in tests at General Motors Proving Ground and, later, in millions of miles of owner service.

Greater Safety on Ice and Slippery Roads

A swift shift into second on ice or slippery roads gives you the braking effect of your engine equalized on both rear wheels. This equalization reduces the tendency to skid.

Faster Getaway at Traffic Lights

Quicker, easier gear-shifting means faster acceleration. Drivers of the new Buick Eight with Syncro-Mesh are enjoying a decided advantage at traffic lights.

Greater Safety Going Down Hills

Buick Syncro-Mesh transmission enables you to shift instantly and easily into second gear, if necessary, and thus utilize the additional braking power of the engine.

Syncro-Mesh Makes Everyone an Expert at Gear-Shifting

With Buick's Syncro-Mesh transmission one can always shift gears smoothly and silently. No conscious effort is required, for the gears mesh without clash.

West Penn to Quit Kittanning Service

KITTANNING, Pa., March 17.—President of Council E. Schaeffer, has announced that the West Penn Railways Company will abandon street railway service here as soon as the borough begins the repaving of North McKean street. The railways company holds that it is now losing money and that any expenditure to resurface the streets would be too great.

Stomach Like New! Pain Gone! Sleep Well!

"What a difference in my health! ACIDINE has made my stomach like new. I have no pains in my limbs. My bowels are regular. Now I sleep all night," says Asa B. Hoy, of Indianapolis, Ind.

Thousands are astonished how this new prescription ACIDINE succeeds where other known remedies fail. The reason is that it is entirely different. Contains an effective scientific digestant, Japtase, that promptly liquefies 800 times its own weight of heavy, starchy food, under proper conditions. Five other ingredients relieve burning acid, stop gas and soothe irritated stomach lining. No other known remedy contains this scientific combination to end stomach trouble.

Physicians are prescribing ACIDINE, and thousands have found it the only real relief from acid indigestion and dyspepsia, gas, pain, heartburn, coated tongue, bad taste, dizziness and other troubles from the stomach.

Don't take chances with acidity and gas that may lead to more dangerous illness. Get ACIDINE today and watch how quick pain, gas end. You can smoke, eat and drink what you want if you take ACIDINE to stop resulting acidity. Results guaranteed or your money back. Get ACIDINE from any druggist today.

Mothers, Mix This At Home for a Bad Cough

You'll be pleasantly surprised when you make up this simple home mixture and try it for a distressing cough or chest cold. It takes but a moment to mix and costs little, but it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. Pour this into a pint bottle; then fill it with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. The full pint thus made costs no more than a small bottle of ready-made medicine, yet it is much more effective. It is pure, keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

This simple remedy has a remarkable three-fold action. It goes right to the seat of trouble, loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and soothes away the inflammation. Part of the medicine is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly upon the bronchial tubes and thus helps inwardly to throw off the whole trouble with surprising ease.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Old Sore Tortured For 30 Years

She Is Happy Now

For 30 long, pain-tortured years, Mrs. J. C. Henderson, of North Carolina, had an ulcer on her ankle—no matter what treatment she tried or amount of money she spent—nothing helped her distressing condition.

Someone suggested Peterson's Ointment to her—she admits she was doubtful, but she was so discouraged with this never-ceasing agony she was willing to try anything.

Before Mrs. Henderson had finished her second box of Peterson's the ulcer had completely disappeared—she was overjoyed to think that at last she could enjoy living.

Peterson's Ointment accomplishes these near miracles because it's so powerfully healing. Even one application instantly relieves the pain and soreness of bruises, piles, boils—a few days' treatment entirely banishes pimples, blackheads—even the long-standing cases. A 35c box proves it—all drug stores.

BAUME BENGUÉ (pronounced Ben-Gay) quickly relieves the knife-like pain or "crick" in the back due to lumbago or sacro-iliac disturbance. Its penetrating quality stimulates circulation, lessens congestion and soothes the irritated nerves. Its exceptional pain-relieving properties bring immediate comfort. Good for every pain of nerve and muscle.

GROTTO VOTES $160,000 HOME

Members of Islam Grotto passed a resolution at a meeting last night in Moose Temple, Penn avenue, to erect a $160,000 building in Montgomery avenue, near Sandusky street, North Side.

The site for the building, valued at $70,000 and containing 10 dwellings, has already been purchased by the grotto, according to Louis McMahon, secretary of the organization. McMahon said today that the building committee of the grotto will meet tonight to select an architect to finish plans for the new building. These plans are expected to be completed within 30 days.

The front of the building is to be of Syrian architecture with a colored terra cotta finish. The main entrance will be of bronze and glass with bronze moldings extending to the ceiling of the vestibule. An auditorium, banquet rooms, reception facilities and reading rooms will also be provided.

Plan Home Units For Vet Hospitals

WASHINGTON, March 17.—(A.P.)—Laying down a plan for consolidation of veterans' activities in the different areas whenever feasible, the Veterans' Bureau announced today that wherever possible soldiers home units would be built in connection with existing hospitals instead of as separate units.

The board of hospitalization made the announcement in making known plans for construction in the Northwest Pacific States.

Do This For Quick Relief

It's a fine thing to get up from a hearty meal, knowing that the food you have enjoyed will be easily digested, without pain or any stomach suffering. Yet, it's the easiest thing in the world to avoid indigestion or, if you are a habitual sufferer, to stop it, and keep the stomach in perfect health. Just a little "Bisurated" Magnesia, either powder or tablets, taken after eating, instantly neutralizes the excess acids which cause the trouble, prevents fermentation and gas formation, and soothes and strengthens the inflamed stomach lining. "Bisurated" Magnesia, which is sold by May-Liggett Drug Stores and reliable druggists everywhere, is the treatment recommended by doctors and by thousands of one-time sufferers, who have proved again and again that it is a prompt and certain reliever of acid caused digestive troubles.

every expectant MOTHER SHOULD KNOW ABOUT THIS DENTIFRICE

For then, of all times, the best possible care of teeth and gums is imperative. Yet, how will you decide? There are so many theories—so many different dentifrices.

A leading research institution made an investigation among 50,000 practicing dentists in order that this question might be answered by a real court of authority. Read the summary of the replies received. It points directly to one type of dentifrice:

95% of the answers stated that germ acids most frequently cause tooth decay and gum irritation;

95% agreed that the most serious trouble occurs at the place where teeth and gums meet;

85% stated that the best product to prevent these acids from causing decay and irritating the gums is Milk of Magnesia.

Isn't this convincing assurance that Squibb Dental Cream will protect your teeth and gums? It is made with more than 50% Squibb Milk of Magnesia.

Squibb's cleans beautifully—and so safely. It contains no grit, no astringent, nothing which might injure. And it refreshes the mouth so delightfully that it is a real pleasure to use.

BRIDGE REPAIR FUND ASKED

An appropriation of $15,000 for engineering expenses, including repairs to the Herron avenue bridge, has been asked of City Council by the Department of Public Works.

Immediate repairs are needed on the span, Chief Engineer Charles Reppert said, and to put it in first-class condition would cost approximately $46,000.

The repairs can be held down to $4,000 or $5,000 for the year, according to Reppert, if there is some indication from Council that a people's bond issue might be passed for erection of a new bridge. The bridge was built in 1888. The $15,000 will also cover repair work aside from the Herron avenue job.

POOL SOUGHT FOR 3 WARDS

Several score residents of the Twenty-fourth, Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth wards have petitioned city officials for a swimming pool to be erected at Rising Main avenue and Harvard street, this summer. The site was formerly used as a city pumping station.

The petition declares the pool would provide long-awaited recreational facilities for the residents of the three wards. Council referred the request to committee.

Specify Kotex when you buy sanitary pads

HOURS at the opera, hours in business, hours out-of-doors—always the feeling of perfect freedom when Kotex is your sanitary protection. Kotex is shaped to fit under any sort of gown. It is highly absorbent (5 times more by test than surgical cotton). It is guaranteed to give more protection, longer protection than any other sanitary pad.

Kotex is treated to deodorize. It is soft—not merely a surface softness but a delicate, lasting softness. It is adjustable, because of the layer construction of its absorbent filler, so that you can change its size to suit your changing needs. It may (and this is important) be worn on either side with equal efficiency.

It is disposable, easily, quickly—one very important reason for preferring this modern sanitary protection.

M'CORMACK STARS IN ST. PATRICK RADIO CARD

"Anybody here seen Kelly—
Kelly with the green neck tie?"

It's another St. Patrick's Day we're a-havin' and shure to goodness there's nobuddy like Kelly for the wearin' of the green.

Where's Kelly? They've been a-lookin' for him all these years and shure enough they've never found 'im.

But the broadcasters have done right by their Nell. They've located the man who created "Kelly." William J. McKenna, composer, relates the story of his song to the WCAE audience at 9:30.

Hulda has her dream of an ideal radio station—no Amos 'n' Andy, no time signals, no political speeches, no tenors, no recorded programs—and a piccolo trill for station standby.

The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, March 17.—Thoughts at random: Every phase of American life has been represented on the microphones save that of tracing family lineage back to the Mayflower.

Broadcasters are never satisfied with leaving well enough alone. They have ransacked the shelves and found—"Camille" . . . Of all the entertainers in the radio parade, the largest studio stampede attends the weekly warblings of Maurice Chevalier. The stampede is, of course, due to Chevalier's eminence as a celluloid lover . . . Who isn't on the radio these days? The broadcasters have even hunted down the inventor of the "platinum blonde" shade for the hair . . . Radio still shushes at controversial subjects . . . Spies report that no orders for steel have yet been placed for Radio City.

The grand vizers of the air recently turned down the aged melody man who wrote "A Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight," but where is the forgotten musical pathfinder who lifted the "Hoochie Coochie" from its long repose in Babylonian archives? . . . Broadway melody men have finally got around to making faces at the broadcasters with a song called "By Special Permission of the Copyright Owners, I Love You" . . . An opening of the Canadian Parliament has been broadcast. Not much headway has been made, however, in the effort to broadcast an opening of Congress.

Theo Alban, radio tenor, was formerly known as the "Heartbreaker of the Air." When he married the Baroness Esmee de Laudin—he met her by answering her fan letter—he dropped the title upon her advice . . . No regular place in the radio sun has yet been found for Eddie Leonard. Nor for any of Eddie's old songs. You remember, of course, "Roll Dem Roly Boly Eyes' . . . Josephine Young, daughter of Owen D. Young, has an executive position with NBC . . . The "Peanut Vendor" epidemic is waning at last. Six weeks is the average length of a radio song fever.

Broadway researchers have discovered that bass-viol playing is hereditary. In 10 leading radio orchestras those who pick on the bull-fiddle can point to either fathers or grandfathers who chose the same instrument in their time..... It's difficult to dispose of a bass viol once it comes into a household....There would be no protest to our Congressman were a law passed forbidding any further performances of Helen Kane imitators, baby-talk artists, nice Nellie announcers, cooking lessons, gardening lessons, budget lessons, lessons...

Godfrel Ludlow has played a fiddle longer than any other man in radio. Joe White has listed a voice in song longer than any other man in radio . . . Were all the batons used in broadcasting collected in one pile there would be enough lumber for another theater in Radio City . . . Wonder why the broadcasters don't string their microphones into the sessions of the Anti-Saloon League . . . One thing can be said for announcers. At least they do not clear their throats over the microphone.

Were we summoned to the witness chair by a Senate investigating committee we would have to admit that we have never heard on the radio a discussion of "What's the matter with Kansas?" a candidate declares, "I'm as wet as the Atlantic Ocean," a chorus sing "How Dry I Am," a program composed entirely of stein songs . . . Were I a crystal-gazer I would predict that Kreisler will be the last important concert artist of our time to play upon the microphones . . . The rarest figures in radio are those speakers who can talk without benefit of manuscript.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Society Folk Hear Singer And Play

Just everybody in the social world who's in town just now fared forth last night either to the Alvin to see "Lysistrata" or to Carnegie Music Hall to hear Lily Pons.

The audiences at both attractions were brilliantly gowned and jeered.

Before I tell you about some of the folks I saw at the Alvin, I want to mention that after the concert at Carnegie Music Hall, Col. Samuel Harden Church, president of the Carnegie Institute, gave a reception in his offices for the artist. Among the guests were the Richard Beatty Mellons, the Roy Arthur Hamils, the B. F. B. Townsends and other prominent folks.

Receiving For Artist

There was no one intermission at the Alvin last night, but that was a long one in which everyone promenaded up and down the foyer. Among those I noticed were the James McKays with Mrs. McKay wearing a charming gown of black chiffon, moulded to the figure, with the low decolletage boasting pelerines of black chiffon and cream lace.

Mrs. T. M. Jones III wore a black velvet costume and Florence Carroll was in black crepe. Mary Franklin Robinson, back from Palm Beach, was there, wearing a black crepe gown and a robin's egg blue velvet wrap. Margaret McCready chose a ruffled gown of American beauty chiffon, and Louise Reed looked distinctive in black crepe and a long white fur coat.

Others I saw were Mrs. Joseph M. Scribner in a black velvet wrap having a scarf collar of white chiffon velvet, and Mrs. Edmund W. Mudge in a white fur wrap. And I believe I had a glimpse of Mrs. W. W. Blair, Jr., arriving with her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Pickering.

Mrs. George L. Craig, Jr., wearing a smartly cut black crepe gown I saw sitting in one of the boxes.

Lily Pons, like a breath of fresh air, attracted a large and very appreciative audience last night at Carnegie Music Hall. I saw the James Francis Burkes entering the hall with Mrs. Burke in blue satin and an ermine coat. The Richard Beatty Mellons, too, were there with Mrs. Mellon in violet chiffon and a wrap of black velvet and ermine. I caught a glimpse of Mrs. Jacob S. Payton and of Mrs. John W. Lawrence, who wore a gown of black crepe with a coat of chinchilla fur. Mrs. George H. Love chose velvet for her gown, with rhinestones outlining the neckline and decolletage.

Soprano Attracts

The William A. Duckhams were in the foyer during the intermission, with Mrs. Duckham in an attractive gown of deep cream satin, and a coat of black velvet and white fox. Mrs. Raymond Ford Moreland chose blue lace for her costume, with a mink coat, and Mrs. John A. Byerly appeared in black crepe with a black velvet and white fox wrap. I caught a glimpse of Virginia Frew Wright too.

I noticed Mrs. Mortimer Miller in blue satin and a wrap of black velvet, with her son, Torrence Miller. Mrs. Ralph W. Harbison was there, and Mrs. J. Henry O'Neill.

Martha Edmundson, back from the South, in a gown of gold lame, with a stunning coat of white galyak was with her mother and father, the Frank W. Edmondsons. Mrs. Edmondson chose wood brown crepe for her gown with a wrap of lame. Kathryn McKlosky wore pansy georgette with a coat of brown caracul.

Brilliant Costumes

Mrs. Francis H. McKnight was up from Sewickley with her sister, Mrs. Gilbert S. Rafferty. Mrs. Charles R. Arrott, who chose blue georgette for her gown, was with her sister, Mrs. Frederick Payne, in flowered chiffon. There was any number of the younger set there last night, including attractive Nancy Hamilton, in pistachio green crepe with a wrap of gold brocade; Mary Mellon McClung, in ecru lace with a cape collar; Helen Pendleton, in pale green crepe; Peggy Milligan, in emerald green velvet and ecru lace, and Mark Black, in black crepe. With them was Emily Frew, in leaf green crepe. Kathleen Guthrie chose black chiffon for her gown. Harriet Ramsburg I noticed, too, and Rosamound Fitch, in green satin with a wrap of black velvet collared with white fox.

Mrs. J. Shirley Austin wore black crepe, with a very modernistic motif at the hipline in turquoise blue crepe, extending into a godet to the hemline. Wilhelmina Balken chose a stunning gown of cream lace with a flaring skirt.

Mrs. Charles Shoemaker, I caught a glimpse of, and Mrs. Walter C. Carroll, in black net with a lamb wrap. The William J. Powells were there, with Mrs. Powell in black chiffon accented with peacock blue velvet bows. Mrs. H. H. McClintic chose black velvet for her gown, with a wrap of black velvet and white fox. Mrs. John A. Murtland was gowned in black net, and Mrs. Moorhead B. Holland, who was with Mr. Holland, wore black crepe. Mrs. Roy A. Hunt wore black net and tulle.

Net To The Fore

Mrs. Robert Kerr Follansbee chose black velvet, and Mrs. William Lloyd Standish, home from the South, chose black crepe. Mrs. Charles A. Fisher was gowned in calaban crepe, and Mrs. George Neale in black velvet with a wrap of velvet embroidered with gold. Barbara Perry Irwin chose flame taffeta, and her aunt, Mrs. Benjamin R. B. Townsend, was costumed in black crepe with a wrap of black velvet and ermine. The Samuel Harden Churches were chatting in the foyer, too.

Miss Olive Clark, daughter of D. L. Clark, of Dunmoyle street, who will marry Graham Caldwell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Caldwell, of South Linden avenue, on April 23, has chosen her bridal party.

Miss Ruth Clark will be her sister's maid of honor, and Mrs. Norman F. Sprague, Jr., the matron of honor. Miss Margaret Clark, another sister of the bride-elect, will be bridesmaid. David B. Caldwell will be his brother's best man, and Harold S. Clark, brother of the bride-elect, and Robert Caldwell, another brother of the bridegroom-elect, will be ushers.

The wedding will take place in the Clark home at 7 o'clock in the evening, with the Rev. George Taylor, Jr., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Wilkinsburg, officiating. There will be a reception in the evening.

It was music and guest day yesterday with the Homestead Woman's Club, which met with Mrs. J. W. Bair, of Eleventh avenue, Munhall. Charles A. H. Pearson talked on the history of music, which he called "the youngest, the least definite, the least practical and the most ideal of all the arts." Mrs. George Regensberger, Mrs. Oliver Heck and Thomas Murdock sang. Mrs. H. D. Everett and Mrs. Murdock accompanying. During the tea hour Mrs. Richard Moon, president of the club, and Mrs. W. F. Nebo poured.

* * *

-:- CLUB NOTES -:-

Will Irwin, famous war correspondent, took the place of Guglielmo Ferrero, Italian historian, at the Twentieth Century Club yesterday morning and under the title "Tainted News" discussed propaganda. He commented on how much of his schooling every person owes to the daily news and went into details as to how propaganda was put over, both at home and abroad, during the war. He cited some sensational examples which he termed "the spontaneous rumors which seem to arise in every war."

Germany's surrender, Mr. Irwin feels, was due to the campaign of propaganda conducted by Lord Northcliffe. He mentioned, too, the propaganda which was responsible for the Italian army's collapse.

Communistic propaganda in this country need not be feared, for the number of enrolled Communists has dwindled so markedly, he declared. Mr. Irwin believes that propaganda in a short campaign is effective, but is lost when it extends over a long period for truth comes to the surface. All journalists, the speaker said, know that there is a queer sixth sense for truth in the human mind; that people have a perception for sincerity.

Club Women Hear Talk By Booth

A vital, dynamic orator, Maj. Charles Brandon Booth, of the Volunteers of America, told the home and welfare departments of the Congress of Clubs about "Criminals in the Making" yesterday and laid the responsibility at the door of every home that is not functioning as a character builder.

With fiery intensity and a kindly sense of humor, competitor of Floyd Gibbons when it comes to speed in speaking, Maj. Booth described conditions in various state prisons and told what is being done by the Volunteers in the way of preventive and curative work. He mentioned the Day Nursery in Pittsburgh where, by caring for 60 children daily, homes are kept intact, and the Sunday school where many children get their first religious contact.

Maj. Booth said he had found only 3 per cent of men in state prisons ever attended Sunday School, and that there are 30,000,000 young people in the United States today who never make any church contacts. Idleness in state prisons, he said, is one of the greatest criminal injustices in the country.

When asked, in the open forum which followed his talk, for his opinion of juries, he said a judge and jury should pass only on the extent of the guilt and that sentence should be passed by a commission composed of a physician, a psychologist, an attorney and others peculiarly fitted for such responsibility.

Mrs. R. Sheldon Lee sang, beautifully accompanied by Grace Blenko Martin. Mrs. J. A. Gesler, welfare chairman, who presided, introduced Mrs. R. W. Johnston, Congress president, and appointed Mrs. Hamilton R. Wicks chairman of a food sale to be held at the clubhouse on April 4.

EVENING GOWNS OF CRISP FABRICS ARE PICTURESQUE

—Sketched in Paris—

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, March 17.—Maybe it is due to the crispness of the spring air, but there certainly must be some reason for the sudden use of fabrics that are crisp and pliant by so many of the leading couturiers. Well, perhaps it isn't an affair of the weather, after all—although it is almost a habit to ascribe everything from catastrophes to corns to the weather. Perhaps it's merely because crisp fabrics, such as taffeta and faille, give the smart silhouette that is so eminently desirable at the moment.

AFTER ALL, a tight bodice with a bell-shaped skirt is a change from a bolero bodice and a softly clinging skirt, isn't it? And so it becomes merely a question of taking (and paying) for your choice. For good evening clothes are as expensive as ever despite their apparent simplicity, as you have no doubt learned when you ordered your new spring gowns. But they are extremely beautiful, and that is the main thing. Especially with evening clothes, when the beautiful, the picturesque are vital to the success of the evening.

WHEN DAY is done we leave behind us the severity that characterizes many of our day clothes and embark on a beautiful adventure wherein we become fairy princesses with garments that seem made of moonbeams and lacy cobwebs, drenched in starlight. Or else we rustle with the swishy charming old-world music of taffeta and faille, those crispest of crisp fabrics.

* * *

CLUSTERS OF petal-like encrustations set on in the manner of godets give a bouffant outline which is most becoming and exceedingly smart. An odd little cuff (or is it perhaps a muff?) is worn on one arm and is made entirely of similar little crisp petals of black faille.

Frat Joiner Bitten By Cat; Almost Gets Bullets

WASHINGTON, Pa., March 17.—Henry Harland, of Rutherford, N. J., being initiated into a fraternity on the Washington and Jefferson College campus, was sent out to bring in a black cat as part of the proceedings.

After a two-hour chase he cornered a dark-hued cat in a back yard and caught it. Leaving the yard with his trophy, he slipped and fell, cutting his right hand on a garbage can. The cat took opportunity to bite him severely on the hand and escaped.

The man of the house, awakened by the commotion, pointed a gun from an upstairs window, demanded an explanation. Harland persuaded him not to shoot. The cat, at last reports, was still free.

To take that gray look out of your wash

BY MARY LEE WORK

An Easier Way To Wash Clothes —And Do Various Other Hard Jobs in Half the Time

Here's a new method of washing clothes that takes the drudgery out of washday. Everywhere you go, women are using it because it makes living so much easier—so much more worth while.

With it, you do any kind of washing—from the stoutest linens to delicately-colored children's clothes; costly lingerie—in half the time it takes you to do it now—or less.

And—you banish and avoid entirely streaks, spots, that ugly gray look women complain of. And fade of any kind. In careful laboratory tests a man's blue shirt for instance, was washed 75 times without appreciable fade. This is probably twice the washing the average shirt gets before it is worn out.

How To Do It

You get a package of a preparation called Climalene at any grocery store for a dime. Put 2 tablespoonfuls in a washtub of water. Use the same kind of soap you ordinarily do. But use only ¼ the amount you now use. That is all. Then see for yourself the amazing results.

Climalene acts by making water—whether it is hard or medium hard—soft as rain water.

For that reason you use only ¼ the amount of soap you now use. And thus end "soap-eat" and fade of fine things.

Then, due to mildly cleansing properties of its own, it dissolves grime and dirt instantly, thus cutting washing time in half—either in the dishpan or washtub.

Shop With The Time Saved

Consider what you can do with the time you save. Thousands of women shop, go to the movies, enjoy life with the time they save this way. Do the things you now think only a woman with servants can do.

And have hands caressingly smooth and lovely. For Climalene acts as a beautifying agent to the hands.

Marvelous For Dishes, Too

You use Climalene too, to wash dishes in half the time and have them shine and sparkle marvelously—just as they do in shop windows.

Use too, to clean silver, to remove "bathtub ring", to make scrubbing, scouring, cleaning of all sorts, far simpler and quicker. Full directions come with every package. Try it. Find out what it can do for you.

ERK PLAN TO ADVERTISE CITY UPHELD

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

William Pfarr

Councilmen often have to take a lot of joshing because of the comparatively few hours they spend on their jobs. Whether they do or not, an excellent contrast is Dr. Kerr, the controller. The other morning, and this may be a typical day for all we know, Dr. Kerr was up and about at 6:30. At 8:30 he was in his controller's office and already had performed three surgical operations in South Side Hospital. The rest of the day he was the controller and being a controller these days is no leisurely job.

The doctor has a lot of friends who are giving him a dinner tonight. If he is in a reminiscent mood he'll be able to keep his audience on ear. He was a councilman back in the days when councilmen were novelties and he was a physician in the days when physicians were scarce.

Above all, the doctor should tell his friends tonight of those days when, a young physician trying to appear older, he made the rounds of his South Side patients on horseback — and wearing, to lend dignity to his youth, a "stovepipe" hat.

And if the doctor is in a confessional mood, he can admit to officiating at the birth of a young man who later turned out to be a sports writer—a fellow by the name of Havey Boyle.

Norman L. Park tells of a telephone conversation Attorney Frank Zappala had with L. L. Roth, of the Pittsburgh Motor Club, a few days ago.

Frank called Mr. Roth to report a dangerous condition on Hobart street, which was causing several auto accidents. The attorney complained that 89 crashes (eighty-nine) had occurred there during an icy spell. It seems machines making a curve skidded into a pole because the road was banked the wrong way.

Zappala lives right handy there and while he was telephoning his report to Roth he saw, from a window, four more accidents at the same spot.

The other day we printed a line about the fellow who was jubilant because, in a speakeasy, his wife had discovered that certain 15-cent bus checks worked in 25-cent slot machines.

What's more, the wife put one in and hit for eight quarters. Well, there's justice after all, for the fellow, not the wife, went back a few days later, dropped a genuine quarter in the machine and hit for four quarters. Two were bus checks. . . . But wait a minute. He complained to the bartender, and the house cashed the checks for quarters.

It seems that all the luck goes to ward chairmen. Fred Sacher, of the Twenty-ninth Ward in Carrick, for instance. When he started to motor to Florida recently Fred's auto went bad in Elizabeth. It was Sunday, and Sacher went from garage to garage, finding them all closed. He was turning around in a narrow street to make one last attempt at a garage on the outskirts. In turning around he barely ran the car over the curb, glanced and saw, in the gutter, a spring for the accelerator. Well, that was just what was wrong with his car—the spring had broken, or something. Sacher got out, picked up the spring, installed it in his car and continued on to Florida.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

Yesterday was income tax day. And I am in no shape to be funny. Why don't they do it all like they do the gasoline tax. You pay that when you buy it and you are through. Or make the man that pays it to us take it out, or something. The way it is they let us handle it one year, then two and a half months after its all made and spent then they ask you to pay it. But no one that made enough to pay this year should kick. In fact, increased taxes on incomes of over 100,000 net, is where the money should come from to supply work during slack time.

Pershing Elated As Army Fights Under Own Flag

MY EXPERIENCES IN THE WORLD WAR

—By JOHN J. PERSHING—

Commander-in-Chief, American Expeditionary Forces

Succeeding chapters of "My Experiences in the World War" will appear daily and Sunday exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph.

CHAPTER LXV.

"The 1st Army attacked yesterday, and the reduction of the St. Mihiel salient is complete," reads my diary of September 13, written at Ligny-en-Barrois.

"Our troops behaved splendidly. The Secretary of War visited two corps headquarters; returned to Ligny much delighted at our success.

"Petain and I went to the town of St. Mihiel today and were warmly greeted by the people. This is my birthday and a very happy one."

Gen. Pershing

Gen. Dickman

The attack of infantry on the southern face of the St. Mihiel salient started at 5 in the morning, and before that I went with several staff officers to old Fort Gironville, situated on a commanding height overlooking the battlefield from the south. The secondary attack on the west was launched at 8 a. m., as an element of surprise and in order to give more time for artillery preparation there.

A drizzling rain and mist prevented us from getting a clear view, but the progress of our troops could be followed by the barrage which preceded them. Notwithstanding a heavy rainfall the night of September 11-12, the weather gave us an advantage, as the mist partly screened our advance from the enemy.

There was a chill breeze blowing and its direction was such that no sound of firing could be heard from the artillery in our immediate front, although the more distant artillery bombardment on the western face was heard distinctly.

Fight Under Own Flag

The sky over the battlefield, both before and after dawn, aflame with exploding shells, star signals, burning supply dumps and villages, presented a scene at once picturesque and terrible.

The exultation in our minds that here, at last, after 17 months of effort, an American Army was fighting under its own flag, was tempered by the realization of the sacrifice of life on both sides, and yet fate had willed it thus and we must carry through. Confidence in our troops dispelled every doubt of ultimate victory.

As we returned from Gironville, groups of prisoners were already being marched to our stockades in the rear. About 9 o'clock reports began to come in to Army headquarters from all portions of the 25-mile front that everything was going well, with losses light.

Mr. Baker returned from his observation point near the battlefield much elated over the success of the troops. He had been a witness to the first effort of an American Army and it was a proud day for him to feel that as Secretary of War his directing hand had led to such results. He took much pleasure in going about to all parts of the Army, and scorned being treated as a guest.

Thanks to the thorough preparation beforehand, the wire entanglements were more easily overcome than we had expected.

Trained teams of pioneers and engineers, with bangalore torpedoes, wire cutters and axes, assisted in opening gaps in the masses of barbed wire covering the German positions. The leading troops themselves carried along rolls of chicken wire, which was thrown across entanglements here and there, forming a kind of bridge for the infantry.

Overrun Objectives

In all their offensives the Allies had spent days destroying entanglements with artillery fire, or had used a large number of heavy tanks, but we had only a few light tanks, ineffective for such work. The fact that we had smothered the enemy artillery was an advantage, as it enabled the leading waves deliberately to do their work without serious loss.

The quick passage through these entanglements by our troops excited no little surprise among the French, who sent a large number of officers and noncommissioned officers to St. Mihiel several days later to see how it had been done. One of these officers, after his reconnaissance, remarked in all seriousness that the Americans had the advantage over Frenchmen because of their long legs and large feet.

In making our dispositions for battle our older divisions, the 1st, 2d and 42d, had received positions on the southern face opposite the open spaces, to enable them to flank the wooded areas quickly, thus aiding the advance of less experienced units assigned to these areas.

The whole line, pivoting as planned on the 82d Division on the right, advanced resolutely to the attack. The entire operation was carried through with dash and precision.

By afternoon the troops had pushed beyond their scheduled objectives, and by evening had reached the second day's objective on most of the southern front.

The divisions of the 4th Corps (Dickman) and those on the left of the 1st Corps (Liggett) overwhelmed the hostile garrisons, and quickly overran their positions, carrying the fighting into the open. The German resistance on this part of the front was disorganized by the rapidity of our advance and was soon overcome. Although the enemy was expecting an attack he did not think it would take place so soon, and it therefore came as a surprise.

When the 1st Division, on the Detective Good said that during the ride he noticed that O'Donnell answered the description of a man who had stolen $821 from the home of Fred Koslow, 70, of South Nineteenth street, last August. O'Donnell, when questioned, the detectives say, admitted he was the man wanted.

BRACKENRIDGE OUSTER HELD UP

Ouster of Charles O. Wherry and J. W. Wolf, Brackenridge councilmen, ordered by Judge James R. Macfarlane in Common Pleas Court, was postponed when council failed to meet last night due to lack of a quorum.

Allegations against the councilmen were that they violated the law through their interest in contracts for borough supplies. Nolf, a furniture dealer, was charged with selling rubber matting worth $39.60 to the borough and Wherry, a druggist, with selling chemicals valued at $19.50.

Judge Macfarlane held that while the councilmen appeared not to have engaged in corrupt practices, they had violated the law with respect to supplies.

O. K. NEW SPAN AFTER CRASH

Within a few hours after the dangers of Brown's Bridge had been brought to public attention by a truck plunging through the guard rail to the ground 12 feet below, County Commissioners unanimously agreed to the erection of a new bridge eliminating grade crossings on the Homestead side at an estimate cost of $2,750,000.

Plans will be ready for the start of the masonry work within six months, the Commissioners were told by their engineer in charge of bridges, V. R. Covell.

The driver of the truck and his helper narrowly escaped death in the crash. A trolley car slid into the truck on the Homestead end of the bridge, knocking it through the railing.

L. A. Ramsey, of West avenue, thed river, and L. J. Manuka, of 70 Melrose street, leaped to safety. Manuka was injured slightly. The truck was owned by the Pittsburgh Welding Company.

IDEA PRAISED BY INDUSTRY LEADERS

Garland Firm Labels Its Wares 'Pittsburgh'; Rae And Tranter See Benefit

Pittsburgh industries responded with enthusiasm today to the suggestion of Congressman Edmund F. Erk to advertise Pittsburgh by imprinting the name of the city on all staple products manufactured in this district.

In a letter to the Sun-Telegraph Sunday, Erk urged that structural steel and other materials being shipped in great quanities for public buildings throughout the country should be stenciled with the words, "PITTSBURGH, PA." in large letters. The plan, he declared, could be extended to all Pittsburgh-made products, giving the district's industries world-wide advertising.

GARLAND USES PLAN

Councilman Robert Garland, who as president of the Garland Manufacturing Company, has been using the Pittsburgh imprint on electrical conduit and heavy hardware, indorsed the plan. He said:

"Every patriotic Pittsburgher agrees with Congressman Erk's idea. While our firm for years has been using the imprint of Pittsburgh, we realize there is great opportunity for broadside advertising by the use of ample size stenciling. Through united efforts Pittsburgh manufacturers by this method may obtain the benefit of advertising throughout the world."

INDORSED BY RAE

James Rae, president of the Chamber of Commerce, gives his indorsement to the plan:

"I can readily perceive the value of Congressman Erk's suggestion. There is no other medium as simple and yet effective, to focus world-wide attention on this city. As a business man I can realize how the name "PITTSBURGH, PA." on steel beams, for example, would excite the interest of anyone.

"Just as Mr. Erk has pointed out, the cost of such an advertising compaign would be insignificant when compared to the publicity that would be given to Pittsburgh. The plan certainly would go far to acquaint the people of this and other nations of the world with the magnitude and importance of Pittsburg industry."

TRANTER CITES NEED

Henry Tranter, president of the Tranter Manufacturing Company and director of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce said:

"Pittsburgh stands in need of more systematic advertising. In our business we are alert to keep the name of Pittsburgh before the public, and as a result the contractors and consumers who receive our goods know all about Pittsburgh products, but it is the man in the street who must be informed. No better method can be conceived than through the plan Congressman Erk suggests."

H. P. Hoffstot, an executive of the Pressed Steel Car Company, thinks Erk's idea is a good one, but said that under the direction of the Interstate Commerce Commission, his company is obliged to stencil "McKees Rocks" on its steel cars because they are made there.

Executives of the Carnegie Steel Company say they now stencil their products, but not in letters of the size Erk suggests.

T. P. Gaylord, vice president of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, and former president of the Chamber of Commerce, considers the idea a good one.

Cleveland's district attorney questioning "Akron Mary," captured in a Pittsburgh apartment after a month's search. Investigators of the murder of former Cleveland Councilman William E. Potter wanted her to talk about "Pittsburgh Hymie" Martin, on trial Monday.

MRS. MARY OUTLAND

Hymie's Girl Friend Faces Cleveland Murder Quiz

CLEVELAND, March 17.—(AP.)—Detectives of Cleveland and Pittsburgh checked the alibi today of Mrs. Mary Outland Woodfield, companion of "Pittsburgh Hymie" Martin, who is held for the murder of former Councilman William E. Potter.

They wanted to know if Mrs. Woodfield, better known as "Akron Mary," was held prisoner in Pittsburgh in an effort to prevent her from being questioned about Martin's activities. She was arrested there Sunday night.

A Pittsburgh racketeer friend of Martin's was being sought in the hope that he would tell the story of Mrs. Woodfield's seclusion while she was the object of a police hunt for more than a month.

Detectives also attached significance to the presence of Albert Goltsman and David Cohen in the apartment when "Akron Mary" was arrested and to reports that the two, as well as others, made frequent visits there.

Detective Inspector Cornelius W. Cody said he believed the woman had been kept under guard and that the story she told officers was "framed." He pointed out that she maintained she rented the apartment the first week in February whereas he has evidence that she and Martin were together in a Pittsburgh hotel between February 9, when Potter's body was found, and February 12, when Martin was apprehended.

HOME LOOTED IN FAMILY'S ABSENCE

Thieves Force Two Doors To Gain Entrance; Boy Purse-Snatcher Gets $37

Jewelry valued at more than $3,700 was stolen from the home of M. A. Mattes, 5415 Guarino road, Squirrel Hill, city detectives were notified this morning. The robbery was discovered at 1:30 a. m. when members of the family returned after being absent for the evening.

Included in the loot was a diamond bracelet, valued at $1,200; a dinner ring with five diamonds, $2,000; a woman's wrist watch containing several diamonds, $500, and a set of men's cuff links valued at $15.

FORCES DOOR

The robber gained entrance by forcing a garage door and then forcing a door which leads from the garage into the house.

A purse snatcher stole a purse containing $37 from Mrs. Carolina Sinek of 3459 Ridgeway street, while she was walking at Center avenue and Crawford street last night. In reporting the robbery to police she said the robber was a Negro boy.

Two diamond rings valued at $1,100 and $42 in cash were obtained from Harry Steinbach, of 4009 Windsor street, by two highwaymen who held him up near his home early today. After robbing their victim, the thieves threw Steinbach to the pavement and in the fall he lost his glasses. He told police that it was several minutes before he found his glasses and he was unable to tell which way the pair escaped.

OTHER ROBBERIES

From the home of Albert Schuman, 2108 Rockledge street, $12 was taken and from the home of Edward Riesner, 2104 Rockledge street, $17.50 was stolen. Loot from the home of Harry Bierman, 2119 Horton street, totaled $6. Twenty-five 100-pound sacks of flour were taken from a box car in the Pennsylvania Railroad yards at Island avenue.

REFRIGERATOR MEN MEET

Bringing to Pittsburgh distributors of the Norge refrigerator a message of constantly increased demand and sales topping repeatedly increased production schedules, Howard E. Blood, president of the organization, scoffed at the depression today before a meeting of local representatives of the Norge, Blood said.

Judging from the unprecedented increase we are enjoying, I am sure the depression is over. We are confident that this will be the biggest year, by far, that we have ever had."

Mr. Hommell

Blood was to speak at the annual banquet in the Schenley Hotel tonight. John H. Knapp, vice president of the Norge firm, and Chief Engineer O. A. Brandel were to be introduced by Ludwig Hommell, local distributor.

DRY ADVOCATES SEE HOPE IN EDUCATION

Spread of Knowledge Urged As Weapon; Pennington, Cherrington, McGary Talk

Education was stressed as the greatest weapon of prohibition advocates to create enforcement and to emphasize accomplishments of the Eighteenth Amendment in addresses today before a luncheon of the Anti-Saloon League National Forward Movement in Fort Pitt Hotel.

Three national figures in the dry movement were the speakers—Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, of Washington, director of education and research of the Anti-Saloon League; John D. Pennington, federal prohibition administrator for Pennsylvania, and Dr. William P. McGary, aid to Dr. F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the league. They speak again tonight at a dinner in McCreery's dining room.

Discussing the Wickersham report on prohibition, Dr. Cherrington said:

"The commission says prohibition is a national problem and needs a national remedy. It cannot be turned over to state administration. It admitted there had been no adequate enforcement. It further cited the saloon cannot return and that the Eighteenth Amendment cannot be repealed."

Denying prohibition has caused racketeering, Pennington said underworld domination was due to the indifference of the upper world. Dr. McGarey declared there must be a reasonable substitute before any change should be considered, and said local option, state control and other plans thus far advanced will not aid prohibition.

ANCIENT AND MODERN COMEDY AS VIEWED FROM SEATS OF CRITICS

Women of Athens, on Strike To End Bloody War, Win Victory

By GEORGE SEIBEL

The Greeks had words for all the things that went on last night at the Alvin Theater, but Gilbert Seldes has replaced them with more delicate phrases culled from Webster and Roget's Thesaurus. Aside from some of this sugar-coating the baldly bawdy comedy of Aristophanes, called "Lysistrata" after its heroine was given pretty much as the Athenians saw it at the Lenean Festivals. And it proved to be just as up to date as when it was written. It hits our day as it fitted the days of Cleon and Alcibiades. The audience at the Alvin laughed at the horseplay of the President of the Senate, at the amorous infantility of Kalonika, at the slop jars emptied from the walls of the citadel, just as the crowds laughed in old Athens 411 B. C.

George Seibel

If Arthur Sullivan had made the music instead of Leo Ornstein, the text of "Lysistrata" might be by W. S. Gilbert. And if it were not a riotous comedy, filled with horseplay and double entendre, the words of the heroine might be uttered by Jane Addams.

Whether you were shocked or thrilled this old comedy is one of the world's masterpieces, and the performance last night was a miracle of stage management.

There is no curtain, and the hill of the Acropolis has been built up with platforms, stair-cases and towers, with Norman Bel Geddes as the designer. There is no shift of scene, and yet there is no monotony of movement, no want of atmosphere.

THREE FINE PORTRAYALS

In this revel of fun and wisdom called a comedy three characters stand out. Nydia Westman's Kalonika as I have said since I saw her play the part in New York is worth walking 10 miles to see. Charles Coburn as the President of the Senate reveals fully the affinities of the old Athenian with the author of "Pinafore" and "The Mikado." Mrs. Coburn as Lysistrata gives a most intelligent reading driven home by profound sympathy.

Besides these there is the Amazonian Lampito portrayed by Hope Emerson, whose back-slapping must demolish some of the Athenian matrons every week.

Burford Hampden as Kinesias and Isabel Baring as Myrrhina take the broad and bawdy humor of the scene with the bedding in a burlesque tempo that relieves it of gross and vulgar elements.

The cast is a large one, nearly a hundred names are on the program, and all drilled so well that the complicated movements of the rowdy scenes are performed without any apparent confusions or broken femurs. Yet it wouldn't be surprising if the company carried its own bonesetter and the property man had to keep a large supply of arnica.

WOMEN'S LEAGUE FOR PEACE

Gilbert Seldes has not deviated from the plot of Aristophanes any more than the French and German adapters of recent years. And he has not even taken very many liberties with the text, although Euripides is credited with a quotation from Kipling and campus slang like "I'm all wet" occasionally crops out.

The ladies of Athens under the leadership of Lysistrata form a league for peace. They will have nothing to do with their husbands or lovers until the men have stopped the war. The spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak—and from this the humor of the play derives. But the women win the peace is signed, and the play stands as one of the oldest monuments of feminism and pacifism in the world.

It has its lesson for all ages. The women who beat the sons that serve as cannon fodder can stop any war, though we have got far from the primitive passion of old Hellas, maybe.

Have we really? Nydia Westman's baby stare and wistful whimper is the sign of the Eternal Flapper, and the bombast of the statesmen may change its idiom but not its import.

If you can't go to Oxford or Cambridge to become a Greek don, see "Lysistrata" and get your Aristophanes with a Philadelphia trademark. Think with Lysistrata, laugh at the President and fall for Kalonika.

And if you've never been shocked before, here is your best chance to get a classic kick of at least 746 watts.

Guild Player

Leonard Mudie portrays the character of Charles Marsden in the Theater Guild production of "Strange Interlude," which returns to the Nixon next week.

NAVY 'REHEARSES' YEAR FOR ONE SCENE

The Pacific battle fleet of the United States Navy "rehearsed" a solid year for one thrilling scene in "Shipmates," battleship picture in which Robert Montgomery plays the leading role.

Culminating a year's practice and preparation the fleet steamed out to sea for the annual force-firing exercises in which the entire battle resources of the squadron were brought into play for 10 roaring minutes. With the dreadnaughts and their turret batteries of 16-inch guns were the destroyers with intermediate batteries and torpedo tubes, the bombing planes from floating carriers and the fighting seaplanes, launched by catapault from the big ship's decks.

In this great tactical feat some 40,000 men took part and countless tons of ammunition were used in the mighty panorama of destruction staged every year to determine the fitness of Uncle Sam's watchdogs.

The entire spectacle including mock firing was filmed and recorded by the studio and the battleship Colorado was wired for sound and used by the company to complete the shipboard action. Harry Pollard directed the film, and the cast includes Dorothy Jordan, Ernest Torrence, Hobart Bosworth, Cliff Edwards, Joan Marsh, Gavin Gordon, Edward Nugent, George Irving and Hedda Hopper.

Lily Pons, coloratura soprano, recent discovery of the Metropolitan Opera House, made her Pittsburgh bow in Carnegie Music Hall last night. She sang a long and trying program to which the enthusiastic audience compelled her to add many encores.

Mr. Lissfelt

Everyone must have come with some misgivings after the many fiascos following the loud trumpeting of that opera house. But a few phrases of the lovely old Italian "Amarilli" proclaimed the beauty of this new voice, and as the program marched on, so did the true and great qualities of Lily Pons come to light. They say that she is 26 and weighs 106. When she has taken on a few more years and a few more pounds, if she continues her present methods, she should be one of our greatest singers, for her natural voice is so expressive it needs no words to project what Lily Pons knows and feels as a musician. The weaknesses of the highest and her lower tones are so thoroughly offset by the brilliance of her chromatics, glissando, trill and ravishing legato that one listens only with astonishment and pleasure.

Nervousness at first cut short a few fine phrases but had she sung nothing more than the air from "The Czar's Bride" her technical security would have been assured, and her excellent taste made evident. The repertory of a coloratura soprano seems always limited to opera scores; the character of these airs, embellished alike by all composers, wearies the listener far sooner than any other music, yet Lily Pons, through her delightful personality and tone sense, forbids all boredom. We look forward to the day when she should be a supreme interpreter of Mozart and when she can bring us, along with her thrilling fireworks, songs of the greatest lyricists.

Luigi Alberghini contributed a group of solo numbers for the flute and played obbligato to the "Mad Ssene" from "Lucia" and Bishop's "Lo Hear the Gentle Lark." He is a virtuoso. Giuseppe Bamboschek was the guiding hand at the piano.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

BAND REQUESTS PAY FROM CITY

Payment of $110 for the services of the South Hills Brass Band at the Saw Mill Run boulevard dedication December 14, 1929, is demanded of Council in a letter from L. P. Ulrich.

The band was hired by Overbrook Borough, according to the letter, and when the city took over that borough it assumed all liabilities. Ulrich said he had made several appeals to the City Controller for the payment. He said several members of the band were out of work and needed the money badly.

Council referred the bill to the finance committee.

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN GUEST-STARRING IN THE PITT

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

Francis Xavier Bushman, matinee idol of yesterday, is guest-starring with the George Sharp Players this week in the Pitt. The play is "Thin Ice," a transparent little comedy drama, which, in reality, is mostly cracked ice.

Cocktails are consumed at intervals while the plot slowly winds its way through three acts. The meager story is all about an English gentleman and soldier, who becomes a butler in the American home of a friend and helps straighten out said friend's domestic troubles and carries on a mild romance with said friend's sister-in-law.

PLEASANT PERFORMANCE

Mr. Bushman in the butler role gives a pleasant performance. And this, in fact, is all the part permits. The playwright has limited him to a few clever lines and numerous poses. He is as successful, we presume, as any butler would be on drawing-room parade.

Anne Forrest and Mabel Kroman, sisters in real life, are sisters in the play. So if they act natural they deserve no special bouquets. Both, however, lend charm to roles that afford few opportunities. And both wear attractive gowns.

Paul McGrath, who last week showed what he could do when opportunity knocks with a cold hand, consumes a lot of what is supposed to be "Scotch" this week and is given the responsibility of speaking the title line: Darling, we've been skating on thin ice.

UNSPOKEN DRAMA

Other players include Robert Fiske, who makes an effort to appear Spanish; Hugh Banks, who is called to play the "snake" in the drawing room, and Billy Link, all varnished up to look like a Japanese valet.

Though there isn't much drama to the play, there is drama on that stage of Mr. Sharp. It is the drama that is going on in the mind of Mr. Bushman. Winning applause as a butler does he long for the glory that was Rome in Ben Hur's day?

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

There's nothing new under the sun. By now it is evident that the late Avery Hopwood was not the originator of the "bedroom farce." Aristophanes, whose "Lysistrata" is in the Alvin, beat Hopwood to it by 23 centuries.

* * *

St. Patrick ought to be the patron saint of theatrical press agents. His ban on snakes gets publicity to this day.

When the present week has departed the Nixon will come to life again, first with "Strange Interlude" next week, to be followed by "Green Grow the Lilacs," March 30, fifth in the Guild subscription series. Afternoon performances of "Strange Interlude" begin at 5:30. Night shows begin at the same hour.

The recent shower of eggs in a Detroit theater was an old form of criticism that had disappeared. Maybe professional critics are becoming too tolerant.

Anne Forrest will be seen in the role that brought her into prominence on the stage when she appears in "Seventh Heaven" in the Pitt next week.

VAN DYKE FILMING NEW KYNE ROMANCE

W. S. Van Dyke, veteran director of South Sea Island pictures, is again turning to Polynesia in "Never the Twain Shall Meet." The fast moving Peter B. Kyne romance travels from the little island of Riva to gay society of San Francisco and back to Riva, where the natives live in happy oblivion to the civilized world.

Conchita Montenegro, playing Tamea, scintillating little pagan queen of the South Sea island, has every opportunity to give vent to her wildest dreams of dancing in her quest for the love of Dan Pritchard, wealthy scion of the San Francisco social world played by Leslie Howard. Dropped into the lap of luxury at the death of her sea captain father, she exercises her wiles and native charm to battle the sedate ways of Pritchard's fiancee and wins him to follow her to Riva. There comes the struggle to hold Pritchard in her native environment, a struggle tense but futile.

Weird pagan dances, carefree native customs, the devastating and degrading power of the tropics, coupled with the magnetic lure of Tamea, all clash with the bringing up of Pritchard.

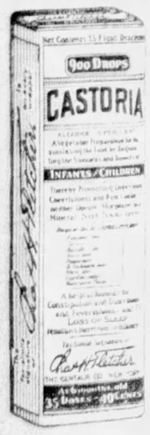
CHILDREN CRY FOR IT!



FIVE million modern mothers will tell you that children DO cry for Fletcher's Castoria. For mothers always give a few drops of this pure vegetable preparation when a child has any of the symptoms that tell of sluggish bowels, colic or other upsets. When tiny tongues are coated and breath is bad. When a child is restless—irritable. Always soothing and comforting to an infant—yet it is effective for children in their teens. You never have to coax children to take Castoria; they love its taste.

Be ready for the next case of sour stomach, constipation, or other need for Castoria!

When buying look for the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher on wrapper.

MY EXPERIENCES IN THE WORLD WAR

By GEN. JOHN J. PERSHING

Commander-in-Chief, American Expeditionary Forces.

marching flank of the southern attack, had broken through the hostile forward positions, the squadron of cavalry attached to the 4th Corps was passed through the breach. At 1:45 p. m. it pushed forward to reconnoiter the roads toward Vigneulles, but encountering machine guns in position was forced to retire.

80th Division to Aid

On the western face of the salient progress was not so satisfactory. The 26th Division, in its attempt to make a deep advance toward Vigneulles, met considerable resistance, and except for a battalion of the division reserve had not reached the day's objective.

The French at the tip of the salient had attempted to follow up the flanks of our successful penetrations, but made only small advances.

Upon the request of Gen. E. J. Blondlat, commanding the French 2nd Colonial Corps, a regiment of the 80th Division (Cronkhite), in reserve, was sent to his assistance.

On the afternoon of the twelfth, learning that the roads leading out of the salient between the two attacks were filled with retreating enemy troops, with their trains and artillery, I gave orders to the commanders of the 4th and 5th Corps to push forward without delay.

Gen. Cronkhite.

Using the telephone myself, I directed the commander of the 5th Corps to send at least one regiment of the 26th Division toward Vigneulles with all possible speed.

That evening a strong force from the 51st Brigade pushed boldly forward and reached Vigneulles at 2:15 a. m., the thirteenth. It immediately made dispositions that effectively closed the roads leading out of the salient west of that point. In the 4th Corps the 2nd Brigade of the 1st Division advanced in force about dawn of the thirteenth, its leading elements reaching Vigneulles by 6 a. m. The salient was closed and our troops were masters of the field.

Enemy Burn Villages

The troops continued to advance on the thirteenth, when the line was established approximately along the final objectives set for this offensive. In view of the favorable situation created just west of the Moselle River by our successes farther to the left, a limited attack was made on that part of the front by elements of the 82nd and 90th Divisions, with good results.

During the night our troops all along the line were engaged in organizing their new positions for defense, preparatory to the withdrawal of divisions and corps troops for participation in the Meuse-Argonne battle. September 14, 15 and 16 local operations continued, consisting of strong reconnaissances, and occupation of better ground for defensive purposes. Beginning the 13th several counter attacks were repulsed. The line as finally established was: Haudimont—Fresnes-en-Woevre—Doncourt—Jaulny—Vandieres.

Reports received the 13th and 14th indicated that the enemy was retreating in considerable disorder. Without doubt an immediate continuation of the advance would have carried us to well beyond the Hindenburg line and possibly into Metz, and the temptation to press on was very great. But we would probably have become deeply involved and delayed the greater Meuse-Argonne operation, to which we were wholly committed.

During the fighting from September 12 to 16, the German 125th, 8th Landwehr, 88th and 28th divisions reinforced the enemy's line, and, several other divisions arrived in reserve positions. September 16, in front of the 1st Army, there were 10 German divisions and two brigades in line, and seven divisions in reserve.

Nearly 16,000 prisoners were taken and some 450 enemy guns had fallen into our hands. Our casualties numbered about 7,000. As the enemy retreated he set fire to many large supply dumps and several villages.

The few remaining French inhabitants who found themselves within our lines were overjoyed to be released from the domination of the enemy, but many were left destitute by the burning of their homes at the very moment of deliverance.

Prisoners Four Years

On the thirteenth, Gen. Petain came by my headquarters and we went together to St. Mihiel, where the people, including children carrying French flags, gave us a welcome which may well be imagined when one realizes that they had been held as prisoners, entirely out of touch with their own countrymen, for four years, though always within sight of the French lines. They had heard only such vague reports of the war as their captors cared to furnish them, which were mainly accounts of German successes.

The people were assembled at the Hotel de Ville, where we talked with the assistant mayor. He told us that in their retreat the Germans had taken away all the Frenchmen between 16 and 45. Fortunately the flight was so rapid that these prisoners were abandoned after a 10-mile march, and returned to St. Mihiel the following day.

The assistant mayor said the Germans had treated the inhabitants well, but he criticized the conduct of a few of his countrywomen, at which Petain kindly remarked that we should not be too severe in our judgment under the circumstances.

On my visit to several corps and divisions headquarters the following day I found all jubilant over the victory and overflowing with incidents of the fighting, reciting many cases of individual heroism among the troops.

Gen. Lejeune

The 2d Division (Lejeunne) and the 89th (Wright) both claimed the honor of capturing Thiaucourt. In assigning objectives, while that village was included in the sector of the 2d Division, the town was to be taken by the 89th should it arrive first. The result was a keen rivalry between these divisions as to which should have the honor.

Both units were equally insistent in upholding their claims, and I never undertook to decide the question. Distinctions in achievement among the attacking units on the southern face could not be made with any assurance, as all had done more than expected.

Attitudes in Evidence

It is never difficult to discover the attitude of a commander, as it is almost certain to be reflected in his unit. If the commander lacks aggressiveness or is disloyal there will be grumbling and criticism of orders from higher authority among his officers and men. If he is aggressive and loyal his command will show it.

I recall one incident which illustrates the point. In conversation with one division commander he was asked the condition of his unit, to which he replied that the men were very tired. Whereupon I remarked that there could be no reason for that, as they had been in the line only a short time, and I added with some emphasis that it was probably the division commander who was tired.

Not long afterward his division lost its cohesion in battle and became much disorganized and he was relieved. Another commander was appointed who was tireless and efficient, and under him the division served with exceptional distinction.

The reduction of the St. Mihiel salient completed the first task of the American Army. Its elimination freed the Paris-Nancy rail communication and the roads that paralleled the Meuse north from St. Mihiel. These at once became available for our use in the greater offensive to be undertaken immediately.

We had restored to France 200 square miles of territory and had placed our army in a favorable situation for further operations. The new American position in the Woevre, almost within reach of Metz, now stood as a threat against the great fortress on the Moselle that defended Germany on that part of the front.

An Encouraging Victory

I was somewhat familiar with the strength of the fortifications, having visited Metz and the surrounding country, including the battlefields of 1870, some years before, little dreaming, however, that one day an American army would be so near and so eager to measure swords with the defenders.

This striking victory completely demonstrated the wisdom of building up a distinct American Army.

No form of propaganda could overcome the depressing effect on the enemy's morale of the fact that a new adversary had been able to put a formidable army into the field against him, which, in its first offensive, could win such an important engagement.

This result, after nearly a year and a half of working and waiting, must have tremendously heartened our people at home, as it gave them a tangible reason to believe our contribution to the war would be the deciding factor. It inspired our troops with unlimited confidence, which was to stand them in good stead against weary days and nights of battle later on.

The St. Mihiel victory probably did more than any single operation of the war to encourage the tired Allies. After the years of doubt and despair, of suffering and loss, it brought them assurance of the final defeat of an enemy whose armies had seemed well-nigh invincible. The French people of all classes were loud in their praise of the Americans.

Warm Congratulations

Many were the messages of congratulations that poured into the 1st Army Headquarters from all sources, some of which are quoted:

From Marshal Foch:

"The 1st American Army, under your command, on this first day has won a magnificent victory by a maneuver as skillfully prepared as it was valiantly executed. I extend to you as well as to the officers and to the troops under your command my warmest congratulations."

From Marshal Haig:

"All ranks of the British armies in France welcome with unbounded admiration and pleasure the victory which has attended the initial offensive of the great American Army under your personal command. I beg you to accept and to convey to all ranks my best congratulations and those of all ranks of the British under my command."

From Gen. Harboard:

"Congratulations on your birthday and your fine work thereon. Nearly 300 years ago Oliver Cromwell on the 13th of the month of September went into battle quoting Psalm 68, now the Episcopal morning prayer for that date: 'Let God arise, and let His enemies be scattered: let them also that hate Him flee before Him. Like as the smoke vanisheth, so shalt thou drive them away.'"

To the latter I replied:

"Many thanks for your birthday telegram. Your old division might well be termed the Ironsides, though I doubt whether they went to battle quoting Psalm 68."

Tomorrow—Pershing reviews St. Mihiel accomplishments.

Don't Quit Living After Making Wrong Decision

Ever [illegible] decision"

Then [illegible] what followed when I was too [illegible]

That's what [illegible] for comfort.

It was a [illegible] of time. Wonderful, [illegible] they'd been. But when [illegible] to marriage she thought she couldn't." So she sent [illegible] And now

"Dear Miss Martin:

"I have debated days whether I should write you this letter, and now here goes.

"I am [illegible] years of age, and I believe that I am above the average in looks, intelligence and the ability to make friends.

"What makes me feel so strange is that I've never in my life have I felt as I feel now. I feel sure that there must be something wrong with me.

"Heretofore I have always been surrounded by friends and have had plenty of dates.

Proposal Refused

"You see I was raised in church [illegible] had many boy friends, both in and out of church circles. Finally and to tell you the truth, I don't know just how it started. I was keeping company with just one young man. And it seemed a much nicer thing to do than to try and have so many dates. So I just went out with him for about three years, and we were great pals and I really liked him better than anybody I had ever gone with.

"Then he proposed and Sally, I played square. I told him that we had been the best of friends, and I liked him better than any boy I knew. But as for marrying him, well, I just couldn't. So he went away from me.

"And gee, Sally, I've been blue ever since. Oh, I don't mean I've been going around with a long face. I haven't done that. But everything seems so empty. He goes with another girl now, and I'd die before I'd let her know it, but I envy her.

"But I did play square. I really didn't love him. At least I thought I didn't. The trouble is that now he and his girl are having a good time in the same circle of friends where I so much enjoyed myself.

"I've quit church. I can't bear to go alone, and it hurts dreadfully [illegible] I was [illegible] and told that I'm doing wrong not to go.

A Bad Mistake

"I hope you don't think the letter childish, and so I've signed it Cecelia and not that I'm ashamed of it, but I'm afraid a smile on my face, but I'm awfully blue. And I have no one but you to tell it to. Mother's gone to heaven, or I would tell her, and God bless her, I think she knows anyway.

"Please help me. I need it so much.

"CECELIA."

So you're blue, are you, honey?

Made a bad mistake?

Then why make another one?

You made your first blunder because you were afraid of life. Afraid to face the big realities of life. Afraid to Grow Up . . . and run the chance of being hurt.

That's why you sent the boy away . . . and sent life away with him.

And now you're doing the same thing over again.

You're leaving your church, your friends—all that has meant life to you because you haven't spunk enough to go with life. You're quitting at the first little pressure of pain.

Stop it!

Stop Crying

Stop acting as if that first wrong decision had wrecked your life for keeps. You'll make a million wrong decisions before you die—if you have the gumption of a wood tick. And you'll be wiser and finer and stronger for every blunder, if you take them right.

As a matter of fact, I can't see that your "decision" has decided anything. The boy hasn't married anyone else. He may be, and probably is, still in love with you. But no one will be in love with you long if you continue this dish-rag act.

If you want life—if you want love and laughter—prove you're worthy of them. Stop being a cry baby. Get out and get busy! Life's waiting for you—but take it from me, kid, life won't wait long for anyone.

Very Few Women Can Drink or Smoke With Proper Reason, Says Fay King

SOME WOMEN SMOKE LIKE CHIMNEYS, BUT WILL NOT LEARN TO "KILL" A DISCARDED CIGARETTE PUT A SOFT PEDAL ON THAT!
PIPE DOWN, WILL YOU?
ONE WOMAN MAKES MORE ANNOYING NOISE AT A DRINKING PARTY THAN A DOZEN MEN
THE TROUBLE WITH MOST WOMEN WHO WANT TO BE CONSIDERED "GOOD SPORTS" IS THAT THEY OVERDO IT AND SO BECOME SPOIL-SPORTS!
FAY KING

By FAY KING

Many women these days imagine they are very smart because they are doing many things that men alone were permitted to do in the past.

But they seem to be making pretty much of a botch of it.

Let us just consider drinking and smoking.

Fifteen drinking men cannot be half so disturbing as one woman who takes a drop too much. Her shrill, high, hysterical laughter gets on everybody's nerves.

Women who smoke do so with such a vengeance. They must puff before meals, and between mouthfuls. Few of them learn to "kill" a cigaret when they discard it. They leave it to smoulder and fill the place with stifling smoke.

Very few women can drink or smoke with proper reason.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Swerves Phil Veritzen From the "Personal" Path.

There was a note of such gloating in Philip Veritzen's voice—unconscious perhaps but distinct, as he commented upon my decision to wear his flowers, that I controlled my fingers with difficulty from the impulse to tear the spray of exquisite white orchids away from my shoulder and hurl it in his smugly smiling face. Two things restrained me. One was the realization that I must not spoil the plan to which even Dicky had acquiesced—that of keeping the famous theatrical producer in a good humor, in the hope that he might later relent toward Mary and Noel. The other was the knowledge that some time during the evening Dicky meant to disabuse his mind, artistically but unmistakably, of any impression that I wore the orchids because I preferred them to my husband's Colonial bouquet of rosebuds.

I shot a furtive glance at Dicky from beneath the lowered eyelashes with which I had received Mr. Veritzen's flamboyant greeting and drew a quick breath of relief when I saw that he was at the other side of the room talking to Helena Brixton, whom he was to take down to dinner, and could not possibly have heard my employer's saccharine tones. Then I looked up at Mr. Veritzen with a little smile.

There was never any question as to my decision in my mind," I said. "How could there be when you have been so munificent to us all? I as the hostess, certainly could not refuse to wear them even if I had wished to be so ungracious. And I did not wish to be," I hastily added as I saw his eyebrows narrow. "The only reason I let you infer an indecision was because Miss Fairfax in a jest of questionable taste gave you the impression that I meant to wear another bouquet."

His brows untwisted themselves, but even as he smiled he looked hard at the rosebuds in my belt. But evidently recollecting his poise and reputed perfect breeding, he made no further comment save a murmured reference to the "orchids suiting me perfectly."

"Thank you," I said conventionally, breathing a little paean of relief that a colloquy I dreaded had proved innocuous. "And now I am sure we are ready to go down to the dining room. Let me see!" I mentally "counted noses" and beckoned to Dickey.

"We can go down now," I said. "Will you tell the men that they will find place cards upon the table showing where they are to sit. The women already know about it."

"And then, oh light of my life, may I rush them into the elevators?" Dicky queried airily. "Otherwise, you're likely to have to restore some of us with pre-war vintage, or what have you, besides running the risk of missing the first of Mr. Veritzen's swell show."

If my fastidious employer winced at Dicky's slangy characterization of the finest theatrical program upon Broadway he did not show it.

"You run no risk, my dear sir," he said a bit pompously. "The curtain will not rise until our party is seated."

"Ah!" Dicky bowed from the waist. "I crave pardon. I should have remembered the prerogatives of the great. But we shouldn't abuse our privileges, so I'll ride hard pronto on these prancing steeds."

"Your husband is pleased to be facetious," Mr. Veritzen said, looking after Dicky as he went from one group to another, patiently relaying my message.

"He is always high-spirited," I returned demurely, but determined to make no apology for my husband to my employer. "And now shall we go down to dinner?"

"Do you mean," there was suddenly something curiously resembling a schoolboy's surprised gratification in his voice, "that I am to be your dinner partner?"

"Who else?" I answered lightly. "I am the hostess, and you are the most important masculine guest."

He made me an elaborate bow before offering me his arm.

"My modesty forbids me to subscribe to the latter statement, but I am deeply grateful and highly honored, nevertheless."

I was glad that no one apparently had heard his elaborate little speech. There was a general movement toward the elevators. Dickey as host, with Helena Brixton, Harry Underwood with Edith Fairfax, and Lillian with Charles Owens, as Lillian and I had planned it when we were putting the place cards around the table.

"I'll take the reptile off your hands if he doesn't show up, which I doubt," Lillian said, "and as for the female of the species, and I mean s-n-a-k-e, Harry will see that dearest Edith doesn't get too cobraish during the party. I only wish we had somebody of his age to pair off with that slicked-hair Cameron, but we haven't."

I sighed an echo to her last three words as I saw the talkie star at Mary's left—Noel had sturdily established himself at her right—and realized that young Cameron meant to monopolize Mary's attention—if he could.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Complexions flourish and thrive under frequent oiling. Any good cream compensates for the ravages of wind, sun and atmospheric dust. For a cleansing agent, use a thin cream. As an insurance against wrinkles apply a heavy emollient. Use the cleanser during the day and the massage cream at night.

Walking washes out the lungs and brings blushes to the cheeks. When a woman is walking at the rate of three miles an hour the respiratory action is four times as great as when she is resting. Getting a fresh supply of air into the lungs daily is an excellent health and beauty habit.

An excellent arrangement for the manicuring outfit is a flat fold of silk of chamois skin, with compartments sewed on for the various instruments—needlepoint scissors, nail file, beveling files of sandpaper, nail white, cuticle cream and all the rest of the manicuring family.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Medicine Keeps in Step With Progress

I do not know how many of my readers have traveled through the Holland Tunnel. This tunnel is a masterpiece of engineering skill. It connects the State of New Jersey with that of New York, passing under the majestic Hudson River.

Dr. Copeland

Not only was the building of this tunnel an engineering achievement, but during its construction we learned a lot about the great strides made in medicine. Loss of life in the building of this gigantic structure was surprisingly small. By an application of the studies made regarding compressed air and its action on the human body, the occurrence of caisson disease was very low.

"Caisson disease" is known also as "compressed air disease" and "diver's paralysis." It used to be a great handicap to all men engaged in underground or underwater construction. This work must be done under compressed air in a caisson, which as you know is a water-tight, air-tight box or tank.

When the body is too quickly subjected to a change in atmospheric pressure the blood circulation and the blood itself are considerably disturbed. In consequence, distressing symptoms develop.

After leaving the caisson, the men complain of headache, dizziness and faintness. In more severe cases they have pains in the legs and abdomen. These symptoms are often associated with nausea.

The workingmen sometimes speak of this condition as "the bends." The same effects have caused the doctors to call it divers paralysis. The legs become paralyzed and though in time this condition disappears, many permanent ill effects may continue.

With the building of the Holland Tunnel and other similar structures, preventative measures have been taken to safeguard the workers against this condition. By what is called "gradual decompression," the evil effects of sudden atmospheric changes are avoided. The men go from one chamber to another, gradually adjusting themselves to the increased pressure. When work must be carried on under very high pressure, the men are permitted to work in very short shifts, perhaps not more than two hours.

We live in a wonderful age, the age of construction. Great buildings, bridges, tunnels and dams have been built by the hundreds. More will be constructed in the future. It is fortunate that medical research goes hand in hand with engineering deeds.

If you believe the world is growing worse, make a study of the building industry. You will be forced to reform your views. As I see it, the world is getting better every day.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Wednesday, March 18

A very active and interesting day may be looked for, according to the lively movements among the actuating planets. This applies to personal as well as business developments, indeed in the realm of the social, domestic or affectional there may be an episode of conspicuous significance, perhaps inciting public comment or encompassing change of environment and new private interests. Change seems imminent with elders rendering solid assistance.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a very lively and interesting year with the probability of change and new environment in business as was as personal alliances. The latter may develop conspicuous angles. Refrain from precipatate and impulsive moves and safeguard writings. All pertaining to publishings, promotion and literary pursuits should flourish. Solid achievements are assured.

A child born on this day should have a good all-round capacity and talent for success in many lines and should be diligent, enterprising and versatile.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Don't "Honk"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it not very rude for a gentleman to honk the horn of his car in front of a girl's home when calling for her?

2. When dropping a girl for a brief call at the home of one of her friends with whom he is not acquainted, should a young man accompany her into the house uninvited, or should he leave her at the door and return to the car to wait? DOUGLAS.

1. Yes, this is decidedly rude. The young man should go to the door and announce himself as a visitor who had arrived on foot!

2. Unless the call is of a nature that would suggest that the girl's companion had better not accompany her into the house (for instance, if she were making a very short visit of condolence) it would be more gracious if she were to invite him to go in with her. It would seem ungracious, I should think, not to invite him to accompany her.

An Agreeable Young Man

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me which is the right procedure? I notice that when I and my "boy friend" have been visiting my girl friend and when we get ready to leave, the young man she goes about with always goes to the door with her. When they come to my home, my friend always says goodbye in the parlor, and does not accompany me to the door to see them off. Which is correct? And if my "boy friend" is in the wrong, how can I tell him about it? L.

I like the informality and friendliness of the young man who goes to the door as the visiting couple leave. Of course it isn't necessary for him to do this, but it is "clubby" and agreeable.

While your friend isn't in the wrong, by any means, I think that the other couple would enjoy having him come to "see them off." Why not say, quite casually, "Do come to the door with us, Bob?"

Acknowledging a Vote of Thanks

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

What is the proper response when an association moves you (the hostess) a vote of thanks for the entertainment you have given them? Is it wrong to say "Thank you" when the vote of thanks is passed?

READER.

This is the best of all things to say; or, if you wish to make it a bit longer, you might say, "Thank you so much. You are very kind to give such a vote, and I appreciate it deeply."

Household Hints

Reputable dealers appreciate intelligence and understanding upon the part of the housewife and, contrary to belief, are usually glad to co-operate with the person who knows what she wants and insists upon having it.

If soot falls on your rug or carpet, do not try to brush or wipe it up. Sprinkle over it a heavy layer of salt and leave it there for an hour. Then lightly sweep it up with a whisk. The soot will come up easily without harming the carpet in any way.

Sport Comment

By JAMES J. LONG

Dukes Better Next Year.
Good Material Coming.
Swetonic Mends Fast.
Dempsey Draws Again.
Nelson's Rough Career.
High Forces Recall.

STEPHENS BLUFF LEADER IN SCORING

BRUD STEPHENS, captain and guard, captured the scoring honors for Duquesne University's basketball season, which closed recently with 12 victories credited to the Dukes out of 18 games played. That record was not exactly what Coach Chick Davies had expected it to be, but he is looking forward to a more successful floor season next time the indoor work rolls around, having a crack freshman squad from which to draw material.

Brud Stephens

Capt. Stephens, George (Ganzy) Benedict, forward, and William (Snabs) Parry, guard, will receive their diplomas in June and the task of filling their uniforms is not going to be the easiest one in the world for Coach Davis. However, with Jim MacDougall, the big center; Marty Reiter, Dody Moore, Audley Davies, brother of the coach; Joe Zerilla and other players of that caliber coming up as sophomores and eligible for their first season on the varsity quintet, the clever mentor of the Bluff school takes the view that the situation could be a great deal worse.

IN 18 GAMES, Capt. Stephens scored 59 field goals, 44 out of 58 fouls and totaled 162 points, which made him high man on the Duke squad. Benedict ran second with a total of 149 points compiled in 18 contests through 40 field goals and 57 out of 90 fouls. John (Bunk) McGeever, at center, earned himself a total of 93 points in 17 games with 36 field goals and 21 out of 31 foul shots.

Subly Irwin was next in line, totaling 66 points in 15 games on 28 field goals and 10 out of 14 charity shots. Parry closed his senior year with a total of 60 points, of which 20 were field goals and 20 were successful foul shots out of 37 tried. Paul (Smoke) Abele turned in 54 points in 18 games played, making 21 field goals and 12 out of 19 foul goals.

BEN PAWLINA played in seven contests and compiled nine points on four field goals and one out of six foul shots. Al Venneri saw service in six games, in which he scored seven points on two field goals and a perfect record of three out of three foul goals. Emmett Neiderberger played in only five contests and brought in four points to the Duke total, garnering them on two field shots.

Only four members of the regular team played in the entire 18 games. They were Benedict, Stephens, Abele and Parry. McGeever, center of the first-string combination, was missing from one game on account of illness.

THE PLAYER RANKING next to McGeever in service was Irwin, who participated in 15 games. Others fell far below that mark, Dave Wilder being nearest, with eight games to his credit. The team scoring of the Dukes showed 621 points made in all, against 498 for opponents. Davies' players turned in 171 foul goals out of 265, while their foemen chalked up only 120 out of 231. Davies notes all these records and shapes his plans accordingly. He is striving to improve the playing of his charges with each succeeding year, now that a new athletic era has opened on the Bluff.

Ernesto Lombardi

PIRATE ROOTERS WHO feared that the Pittsburgh club, when there was a gaping hole in the catching department, had missed something through failing to grab Ernesto Lombardi, who was available in the Coast League at the time, have been reassured by reports of Lombardi's showing with the Robins.

It has been pretty well established, both by his minor league records and his work this spring, that the young Italian is a real hitter, but as a catcher he has displayed nothing to indicate that he is of major league timber. He has a strong throwing arm, but is reported to be awkward behind the plate, weak on foul flies and far from being a Cuyler as a baserunner.

BUT LOMBARDI IS said to be the real thing as a clouter when he takes his 220-pound lunge at the ball. He is said to be quite a sight at the plate, his shoulders slightly hunched, his immense hands wrapped around the handle of an uncommonly long and heavy bat so tight that his knuckles gleam white.

That's what makes Manager Robinson so well satisfied with the Coast recruit. The Robins need a driving right-hand pinch hitter more urgently than they need another catcher, with Lopez and Picinich to do the backstopping, so that Ernesto is apt to prove a valuable member of the outfit even if he does little catching.

MOST ENCOURAGING REPORTS come from Steve Swetonic, Pirate pitcher in St. John's Hospital on the North Side. He has improved so rapidly that, following a change in the dressing on his right arm he will be allowed to leave the hospital tomorrow, and he says he can already move the arm so freely that he is confident he will be able to start throwing much sooner than was originally expected. Steve's general condition, apart from his hurling wing, could not be better. He stepped on the hospital scales this morning and tipped the beam at 176 pounds. His highest figure during the off-season a year ago was 165 pounds. With the advantage of being heavier and stronger than ever before, the North Sider will be all set for the best season of his career as soon as his arm gets back into working order.

THE DRAWING POWERS of Jack Dempsey as a referee were demonstrated again when Paulino Uzcudun and Les Kennedy met in Los Angeles last week, according to financial reports of the show which have just been received from that city. Dempsey is given credit for the increase shown over average receipts.

With the former champion advertised as third man in the ring, the promoters had a record-breaking window sale of $15,000. The receipts grossed $25,905, and with tax deducted the net was $24,610. Paulino had been guaranteed $10,000, Dempsey was paid $3,000 for refereeing and Kennedy received 20 per cent, or $4,922.

THE SCARS OF ring warfare carried by Battling Nelson, who is visiting Frank Klaus, attest the fact that the Durable Dane, in his career from 1896 to 1915, fought in the days when the route was long and tough, and when they gave more attention to trying to land a punch than to trying to stop one of the other fellow's.

Andy High

There were no soft spots for Nelson. He fought one battle of 42 rounds, another of 40, one of 25, one of 23, one of 21, five of 20, and a whole flock that lasted from 15 to 19 stanzas.

WHAT THE OWNERS of the St. Louis National League club, in taking Andy High back on their roster, are pleased to announce as a "decision that they needed more infield reserves," amounts in fact to a victory for High in a holdout in which there were few fans who did not string along with the player. The Cardinals took High back because he refused to go to the Rochester farm. Andy had put in nine years of major league service, needed only one season more to qualify as a 10-year man who could not be sent to a minor league without his consent, and insisted that he was entitled to that extra season of service in the big show. Most fans agreed with him and are pleased that he has carried his point. It's a mystery how waivers ever were obtained on High in the first place. More than one major league club could use the hard-hitting little fellow to advantage. After another season in the majors Andy will be in a different position. He won't have to go to the minors unless he is willing to do so, and if no major league club claims him when waivers are asked the St. Louis club will have to give him his unconditional release.

PLACE IN TITLE SERIES REWARD FOR VICTORY

LONDON, Ont., March 17.—A place in the International Hockey League's annual championship series is the rich prize for which London's Tecumsehs and Pittsburgh's Yellow Jackets will compete here tonight.

The Steel City skaters, who spent last night in Detroit, arrived here today boasting a one-point lead over the local puckmen. Should the visitors win tonight, they will be practically assured of participation in the annual post-season classic, but in the event of a defeat, they will have to surrender the last playoff berth to the Tecumsehs.

PLAYERS WANT DOUGH

A place in the title series means hundreds of extra dollars for each player, and thousands of dollars for each club owner. There is no doubt but that each team will give its best, and that the battling will be hard and fast from start to finish.

The fray is easily the "classic" of the season, and the interest both here and in Pittsburgh is intense. Every ticket for the "big game" was sold several days ago, and the size of the crowd will be limited only by the capacity of the arena.

Although the rival teams heretofore have been regarded as being of about equal strength, the Tecumsehs have been installed as slight favorites tonight because of their superior condition.

LOCALS HANDICAPPED

The Jackets are handicapped by injuries to Gordy Fraser, generally regarded as the league's best defense man, and Duke McCurry, a forward. Fraser has a fractured hand, but he will place the injured member in a special brace and appear in the starting lineup. Mickey McGuire, a veteran center, will appear at left wing on the starting front line in place of the injured McCurry. The latter is sufficiently recovered from severe bruises sustained in the Detroit game to do general relief work.

The Yellow Jackets will wind up their season schedule Friday when they meet the Buffalo Bisons at Pittsburgh. The Tecumsehs are to appear in Detroit Thursday and in Syracuse Sunday after disposing of tonight's crucial fight. The probable lineup:

Pittsburgh.		London.
Cox	G	Stuart
Fraser	L. D	Hicks
Reise	R. D	Holway
Rodden	C	Neville
McGuire	L. W	Pettinger
Greer	R. W	Groh

Spares, Pittsburgh: Berlett, Fields, McCurry, Ouellette, White, McIntyre, Halliday, Proudlock; London: Loughlin, Heinicka, Quenneville, Schneider, Huard, Elliot.

SCHOOLEY PROMPTS KING

Charles S. King, president of the International Hockey League, probably wishes that Roy D. Schooley's knowledge of the legal framework of the circuit were a little less profound.

King yesterday sought to dismiss Pittsburgh's protests of the Cleveland and Windsor games by quoting from Rule 14, which says that a referee's decision shall be regarded as final. The president and manager of the local club last night countered by calling King's attention to the fact that Rule 14 is applicable only while play is in progress, and that Section 27 of the league constitution gives the league prexy power to overrule a referee after receiving a protest.

Schooley will not regard the incident as closed until he receives an answer to his appeal.

Taylor Disqualified For 'Not Trying'

PHILADELPHIA, March 17.—(AP.)—The 10-round fight between Bud Taylor, Terre Haute, Ind., and Lew Massey, Philadelphia, here last night, was stopped early in the eighth round and the decision awarded to Massey. Referee Reilly disqualified the Hoosier battler for "not trying." Both boxers weighed 128½. The purses were held up.

Joe Anderson, 169, Covington, Ky., veteran, cuffed his way to a decision over Matt Adgie, 174, Philadelphia, in the 10-round semi-final.

Wood May Try For Speed Boat Mark Today

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 17.—(AP.)—Seventeen events mark the first day's program of the annual Biscayne Bay regatta today, with major interest centering in the first heat of unlimited outboards for the Col. E. H. R. Green trophy and a speed run by Gar Wood in his Miss America IX.

Wood will send his Miss America in a trial run against his amphibian airplane piloted by Duke Schiller. The American speedboat king will drive his craft down the center of the course in the race with the plane.

Cylinder trouble developed during the trial runs last week caused Wood to install a new engine on the port side of the Miss America IX. The craft was declared in readiness for its run yesterday but Wood did not say when he would make his race against time in an effort to establish a new speedboat record.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: GEN. BUTLER RECEIVED TWO CONGRESSIONAL MEDALS OF HONOR—In 1900, during the Boxer Rebellion, Gen. Smedley D. Butler, who then was serving his first year in the Marine Corps, received the Congressional Medal of Honor "for conspicuous gallantry during an attack on the walled city of Pekin, China." Again, in 1917, while he was serving with the Marines in Haiti, he received a like decoration. Gen. Butler also has the decorations of Army Distinguished Service Medal, Navy Distinguished Service Medal and Brevet Medal. WOMEN WHO TALKED TOO MUCH WERE MUZZLED—Padlock proceedings against women who talked too much were part of German jurisprudence in the Middle Ages. A woman who made herself obnoxious either to her household or to the community at large by nagging or scolding could be proceeded against under the muzzling law. If convicted, a sentence of from one hour to a year could be pronounced against her, during which time she was obliged to wear a muzzle. Muzzles of that kind are exhibits in almost every European museum.

Jones, Von Elm Meet in Match For Charity

SAN DIEGO, Cal., March 17.—(AP.)—Bobby Jones, golfdom's king, will meet one of his greatest rivals of amateur days, George Von Elm, now a professional, in a charity exhibition match at the Agua Caliente Golf Club, Sunday, March 29.

Jones will pair with Leo Diegel, former national professional golf champion, now pro at the Agua Caliente club, against Von Elm and Mortie Dutra, professional of the Virginia County Club, Long Beach.

The match will be 18 holes. Proceeds will be devoted to charity, part going to a fund created in Atlanta by Jones for a crippled children's hospital, half to charity in Lower California, and the rest to charity here.

MONESSEN FIVE IN FINAL

GREENSBURG, Pa., March 17.—Exciting games marked the semi-finals of the annual Westmoreland county high school basketball eliminations here last night in the Greensburg High School gym.

As a result of the class A games Greensburg and Monessen will clash for the county title tonight. Monessen defeated Scottdale, 38-22, and Greensburg emerged triumphant over Jeannette, 17-13.

Scottdale put on a fine scoring spree at the outset, tallying eight points before Monessen could get started. Monessen overlook Scottdale in the second period and held the lead throughout the remainder of the game.

In the class B semi-final games West Newton ovewhelmed Avonmore, 25 to 18, and Sewickley Township downed East Huntingdon, 34-21. Sewickley clashes with West Newton for the title in that class tonight.

SCHENLEY MAY OPEN APRIL 15

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

The Schenley Park municipal links likely will be opened to the public 15 days earlier than usual if the weather breaks right, according to Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang, who, it is reported, declares that if all is well, city golfers may begin play April 15.

Public linksmen will be surprised with the improved tees at all holes, which were completed shortly after the season closed last year. Groundkeeper John Kauffmann has them all installed and in "working order" and the players will find them to their liking.

A personal inspection of the layout is to be made by Director Lang in the near future. He has not, as yet, appointed a successor to Al McBride as professional, although it is said that the field has been narrowed down to a select three.

Mrs. F. M. Sloan of Edgewood, president of the Women's Golf Association of Western Pennsylvania, will be hostess to a party of local golfers this week at the Ocala Highlands Country Club, in Florida. Two special carloads of local golfers are journeying to the Ocala course, which was constructed by E. Ellsworth Giles, local golf architect.

Heydler Praises Camp Spirit Of Phils

WINTER HAVEN, Fla., March 17.—(AP.)—John A. Heydler, president of the National League, making a tour of the training camps, remarked the fine spirit displayed by the Phillies despite their reverses in practice tilts.

The league prexy thinks the strengthening of the Boston Braves' outfield—the added batting punch—will make them a factor in the pennant race. He also had praise for the up-and-at-'em attitude of the Cincinnati infield. The Cardinals are "starting in where they left off last fall," and in his opinion are real contenders. The Cubs, Pirates and Giants, which he hasn't seen, are also regarded as possibilities.

VETERANS WIN IN CUE PLAY

NEW YORK, March 17.—(AP.)—The national amateur 18.2 balkline billiard championship promises to turn into a three-cornered battle among the three veterans in the tournament, Edgar T. Appleby, of New York, Percy N. Collins, of Chicago, and Ray V. Fessenden, of Madison, Wis.

All three won their opening matches in the round-robin tournament yesterday. Appleby, defending champion, turned back Dale H. Goslin, of Los Angeles, 300 to 235; Collins defeated H. T. Galey, Tulsa, Okla., 300 to 116, and Fessenden conquered Charles Connor, of Philadelphia, 300 to 229.

Today's pairings: Appleby vs. Connor; Collins vs. Goslin; Fessenden vs. Galey.

MEINE, WOOD TO GET MOUND DUTY TODAY

By CHARLES J. DOYLE
Staff Correspondent.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 17.—St. Patrick's Day found the merry Pirates dividing their time between the two great cities of the Bay District—San Francisco and Oakland. The big leaguers, sheltered in the first named town, left for Oakland about noon, they being carded to open their long barnstorming trip this afternoon with the Oakland club of the Pacific Coast League.

The happiest boy in camp today was Ben Sankey, nifty young shortstopper from Alabama. Ben was notified of the arrival of his first born at the family home in Mobile. The welcomed one is an eight-pound boy and the mother and son are fine, according to the information received by the proud father. Ben, Jr., will be the baby's name.

The other exceptionally joyful Bucco is Paul Waner, who this morning signed his contract for the present season. Paul, by the way, is the highest salaried performer on the Pittsburgh club. His check is said to be around $18,000 per season, which also means he is one of the best paid athletes in the league.

MEINE, WOOD TO HURL

Manager Ens said today he intended to use Heinie Meine and Charley Wood on the slab in the first clash in Oakland. The veteran righthander is in fine fettle, on top of his illness of last season, while Spades Wood is just about ready to go the full distance on the hill.

Rolly Hemsley and Jack Mealey are likely to divide the backstopping assignment. Hemsley will do the trick with the St. Louis Dutchman, Mealey to perform while Wood is in operation on the mound. Jack is the only catcher Ens has viewed who handles Spades in the proper manner.

It was a well-conditioned group of ball tossers who reached this Pacific Coast League stronghold last night. The training work at Paso Robles was exceptionally fine, and Manager Ens did not hesitate to express his thankfulness over the favors he and his club received.

Jewel is hopeful the ideal conditions will be continued while his club remains in the Far West. The Pirates will be in this neck of the woods until Sunday night, when they pull out for Los Angeles, where they will sport themselves for something like 10 days.

TIGERS NEXT FOE

After finishing with the Oaks tomorrow, the Buccos will make ready for five games to be played on the beautiful new ball park recently dedicated in San Francisco. The Freebooters will take on the Detroit Tigers in this spacious orchard Thursday.

The Tigers will tarry only for one day, the Chicago Cubs to clash with the Rovers Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Two games are scheduled for the last date.

In view of the ailing condition of Paul Waner and Adam Comorosky, it is likely Ens will give plenty of work to his extra outfielders. Brother Paul's leg is getting along splendidly, but it would be foolish for him to attempt to play while the injured part is in the healing process.

Comorosky's rash appears to be getting well, but the Polish Flyer is worried over his condition. He is getting especial attention. He could play now, if necessary, but he is likely to be used only at intervals until he reaches a better condition.

FOUL SHOOTING SLATED

Open to all amateur athletes of the United States and with entries open to amateurs of all ages, the A. M. A. basketball foul shooting tourney to be conducted at the Irene Kaufmann Settlement gymnasium is attracting the attention of scores of athletes in the Tri-State district. Entries have been sent to distant points and competitors throughout the district already have expressed intentions of registering.

Says Nick Altrock

(Baseball's Comedian)

BILOXI, Miss., March 17.—The way the boys are slamming the apple already, it would be cheaper if the magnates put their pitchers on piece work this year and paid 'em by the inning or fraction. The ball has its old Spanish custom of whizzing right back in no seconds flat. And a guy in the pitcher's box this season is just an artillery target out in no man's land, and a bulletproof vest wouldn't do him any good. What a pitcher needs is a suit of armor and a diver's helmet. I see Rabbit Maranville has clinched his job at shortstop for the Braves again. I'm just a gigolo, when you think of that bird.

SCOTT PRIMED FOR DUQUESNE TOMORROW

Borotra, Boussus and Landry Advance in National Indoor Net Play

W. P. I. A. L. FLOOR TITLE AT STAKE

By JESS CARVER

The situation as regards the P. I. A. A. exception is exceptional for Pittsburgh. Solutions between W. P. I. A. L. (District VII) and District VIII (the City League) is pretty well cleared up.

Scott High of North Braddock generally favorite to win the W. P. I. A. L. title tomorrow evening in the final game of the annual league championship elimination series, has made it plain that it does not propose to meet Westinghouse, named to represent the City League in the final P. I. A. A. play. The stand advanced by Scott for taking this stand is that the team has already played enough basketball. If that is to be Scott's stand, OK. The boys have played about 24 games to date, which is plenty for ANY high school team.

SCOTT FAVORED

At the same time it is about a 2-to-1 bet that Scott will continue in the P. I. A. A. competition if Duquesne is beaten tomorrow. The North Braddock team is a good one, and I think the coaches and officials know it is good. Of course, Duquesne must not be counted out for any team that can reach the final round of a W. P. I. A. L. tourney must have something on the ball besides a prayer. Wouldn't it be a joke if, after all this hubbub and fuss, Scott would blow, and Duquesne annex the title it missed last year by losing to New Kensington in the finals.

The titles have been decided in four of the other six districts of the state league. Steelton is O. K. in District III. Williamsport is "in" in District VI. DuBois won the banner in District IX, and Farrell captures the laurels in District X.

In District I, Allentown, Lower Merion and Manheim City still are scrapping for the championship. As for District II, Scranton Central, Nanticoke, Forest City and Edwardsville still are in the running. Berlin, Rockwood, Boswell and Windber, the defending champion, are hot after the laurels in District V, and Ebensburg and Hollidaysburg are tied for the lead in District VI.

VICTOR STRONG

The chances are that if either Scott or Duquesne carries through to the W. P. I. A. L. title that either will be a red hot favorite to continue on to the state crown. Eastern competition does not appear to be any stronger, if as strong, as it was last year, when Sharon galloped through to the crown and either of the W. P. I. A. L. finalists appear formidable enough to take anything else that may pop its head above water in the middle part of the state or here in the western section.

To return to the local situation. There is no doubt but that the W. P. I. A. L. annually gets the bum end of the deal. This will all be gone into later, in greater detail. However, it might be well for the W. P. I. A. L. champion whoever it may be to go on and play through the P. I. A. A. tourney this year and then put up a real honest-to-goodness squawk after the tourney is over and the state title decided.

The state officials mean well, but so does the guy who wants to know who that lady was you were out with last night.

H. W. Crane, president of the W. P. I. A. L., has said that if Scott defeats Duquesne tomorrow it will have to play Westinghouse in the P. I. A. A. eliminations. Duquesne, if it is beaten, may play Westinghouse in the event Scott declines, it is said, in the state series.

Duquesne Junior High champion of Section II, in the newly formed Junior W. P. I. A. L., will face Rostraver Township Junior High Section I champ tonight in the Duquesne gym in the playoff for the league title, the game starting at 7:45 o'clock.

Ted Yarosz Wins Over Joe Trippe

OIL CITY, Pa., March 17.—(AP)—Ted Yarosz, 147, Monaca, won a 10-round decision here last night over Joe Trippe, 144, Buffalo, N. Y. Tony George, 131, Buffalo, won in six rounds over Jimmy Dean, 132½, Erie.

Homer Pietsch, 152, Buffalo, won on a technical knockout over Tommy Murphy, 155, East Liverpool, O., in the first round.

DAY, 21, GAINS ALL-EVENTS PIN LEAD

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 17.—(AP.)—Paul Day, 21-year-old pin toppler, supplied the heavy bombarding in the American Bowling Congress tourney yesterday. The Louisville roller crashed through to the lead in the all-events division with a mighty 1918 total and had Bert Bevers, Syracuse, for second berth in the singles division when he counted 664 in the solo event.

Day, who rolled in his first A. B. C. tourney at Cleveland last year and just missed averaging 200, was easily the outstanding bowler in the big pin meet. He counted 588 in the team event, followed with 666 in the doubles and his 664 individual count gave him a grand average of 213.

Pete Young, who won the doubles title in 1926, placed Akron, O., sixth in the singles division when he totaled 660. Jack Powell, another Akron bowler, took seventh place with 654.

While Day was counting 666 in the doubles, his partner, H. Kuhn, contributed 568, the pair taking fourth place in the doubles with 1,234.

Five changes occurred among the big ten leaders in the minor events.

After rolling counts of 169 and 186, Frank McCambridge, of Akron, opened his final game with a strike and followed with a spare. He then chalked up 10 consecutive strikes for a 280 game. The score, however, was rolled in the doubles event, McCambridge being paired with M. Summa. The team only counted 1,153, Summa rolling scores of 157, 191 and 170.

GYM CONTEST CARDED

The gymnastic contest will take place at East Pittsburgh Turner Hall Thursday evening, March 26, in which three crack teams will compete for a silver trophy. The teams are from Allentown, Ambridge and East Pittsburgh Turnverein. The judges will be Dr. Herman Groth and Harry Dippold, and Walkers Pennsylvanians will furnish the music.

BANKER FIVES TO BATTLE TONIGHT

By JULIUS LEVIN.

Memories of the old Pittsburgh Bankers' League will be revived at Fifth Avenue High School tonight when the perennial champion of that loop, Mellon National, opposes Peoples Savings Company. The two banks have been staunch basketball rivals for years and their teams are expected to put up a brilliant exhibition tonight as both include stars in their lineups.

Ralph McCall will be in charge of the Mellon team and his supporting cast will include Dennis, Brown, Wadsworth, Keller, Neff and Wilson. The Peoples team will be led by Coach Rankin and will have in its lineup Allebach, Morgan, Bond and Evans.

Mt. Troy will be the attraction of First Presbyterian in a Senior Church League contest, while Mt. Troy Juniors play at First Presbyterian Juniors in a Junior Church League fray.

Tomorrow night in Carrick High School the Goldenson Vanities, champions of Western Pennsylvania as a result of winning 40 of their last 41 games, will meet the Butler girls in a benefit game sponsored by the Carrick Police Relief Association. The Vanities won 39 straight games before they were stopped in a tournament in Cleveland. No district team has beaten them in the last three years.

The South Side Falcons were nosed out by the Ray Schneiders, 35-33, in their exciting West Penn League conflict last night. Daro advanced in the Metropolitan League when Brentwood forfeited.

The Penn Five, Felt, McMahons, Wolfe, Vandergrift and Julian Drugs copped independent engagements. Trinity Cathedral Royals were beaten out by the Greensburg Overlys, 29-22, at the Greensburg Y. M. C. A.

FRENCH THREAT EASILY SETS DOWN FOES

NEW YORK, March 17.—(AP.)—The national indoor tennis singles championship was in the third round today with the threefold French threat just as potent as it was when the tournament began last Saturday.

Jean Borotra, Christian Boussus and Pierre Landry, forming the French contingent, have played a total of only 12 sets in eliminating half that many rivals. Each has played two matches and won them both in straight sets.

Their next tests, however, promise to demand a little more effort on the part of the invaders. Boussus meets William Aydelotte, of New York, who won the championship in 1928. Borotra, three-times winner of the title, engages Edward W. Burns, of New York, who yesterday put out the seeded player, Donald Cram, of Nashville, Tenn., and Landry faces the veteran New Yorker, Herbert L. Bowman.

The chief American hopes, Frank Shields, Berkeley Bell and Cliff Sutter, also reached the third round although Sutter had to travel three sets to eliminate E. Ramey Donovan yesterday.

To make room for the start of doubles competition, only two singles matches were on today's program. Borotra battling Burns in one and Shields facing Mitchell M. Rosenbaum, of New York University, in the other.

Twenty-four teams have entered doubles play. The four seeded teams were Borotra and Boussus, Landry and Sutter, Bell and Merritt C. Culter, and Aydelotte and Perrine Rockafellow.

BRANNON VICTIM

ANDERSON GETS UNEARNED WIN OVER EDDIE

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

Royalty of the ring looked on at Motor Square Garden last night as Eddie Brannon, local Negro lightweight, defeated Eddie Anderson, colorful former cowboy puncher, of Wyoming, in their return 10-round windup, but didn't get credit for the victory, the judges agreeing on Anderson, while the referee's vote, which didn't count, went to Brannon.

The royalty consisted of two former world champions, Frank Klaus, of Braddock, erstwhile middleweight titleholder and a familiar figure at the local arenas, and Oscar (Battling) Nelson, one of the greats among the lightweight champions. They took a bow from the ring just before the main bout and the fans made the welkin ring as they roared in tribute.

The old Durable Dane, now hovering around the 50-year mark, and wearing a light brown suit and heavy-rimmed glasses, made a neat appearance for a knight of the ring who has been through the stormy wars that marked his career. He is visiting with Klaus at the latter's home this week, en route to his home in Hegewich, Ill., from Miami, Fla., where he attended the Primo Carnera-Jim Maloney bout recently, along with Klaus and other former champions.

GRUELING BATTLE

The Brannon-Anderson battle, like their first meeting, was a grueling affair over the entire route and pretty much of a see-saw contest, with Anderson getting off to a fine lead in the first two rounds, losing the next two by small margins, coming back to win the fifth and break even in the sixth and then win only the ninth out of the last four. He took a bad pounding in the seventh, eighth and tenth, and was rocky on several occasions. In addition, Brannon forced the fighting almost all of the way, and the referee had to step between them and warn Anderson to quit tincanning and open up and do some leading in the seventh round.

Anderson outboxed and outpunched Brannon in their first meeting, in the same ring, a month ago, but last night Brannon proved too strong and too hard a hitter for him. Anderson was the same good showman as of yore, fighting in flashes and taking advantage of Brannon's ineptitude in the clinches, where he pummeled away with both fists until broken by the referee, but his punching lacked the authority of Brannon's and he finished a badly spent warrior.

BRANNON LOSES FORFEIT

The crowd took the decision with mingled boos and cheers, but the consensus of ringside opinion was almost solidly for Brannon as the victor. A number of low punches marked the battle, along with roughness.

Brannon lost a weight forfeit of $100 when he scaled in three pounds over the prescribed limit of 138 pounds at 3 p. m. Anderson just made the weight.

Benny Gershe, veteran southpaw, of Cleveland, punched out a decision over Joe Marciente, of Brooklyn, in the eight-round semi-final, despite the fact that he injured his best hitting hand, the left, in the second round. Marciente was the aggressor most of the way, but Gershe did the effective scoring. Gershe weighed 127 pounds against 128½ for Marciente.

FINE BEATS KAUFMAN

Handicapped in height and reach, Harry Fine of the Hill, carried the fighting to Eddie Kaufman, of Cleveland, throughout to win the unanimous decision in the second bout, and Jimmy Reilly, of McKeesport, handed out a pasting to Peaches Gallagher, of Swissvale, in the opener. Kaufman weighed 141½ and Fine 139¾. Reilly scaled 134 and Gallagher 130½.

Al Grayber refereed the main and second bouts and Eddie Kennedy the other two. Frank Brown and Frank Ferris were the judges and A. C. Couch and Norman Borland the timers, with Harry Klaas doing the announcing.

Due to the inability of Al Fay, Charleroi heavyweight, to go through with a match with Emmett Rocco, of Ellwood City, no card was announced for next Monday night.

Between Rounds

Benny McArthur, of McKeesport, has been matched to box Lou Petrone, of Roston, and Andy Andricci, of the East End, to oppose Harry Devine, of Boston, in two 10-round bouts at Erie Friday night.

Charley Bradd, McKeesport heavyweight, is paired with Chuck Doris in a 10-round bout on an all-star card at Saginaw, Mich., next Monday night.

Sparky Ewalt and Slim Kovac, heavyweights, will box the main bout of the amateur program for the benefit of the needy of McKees Rocks and Stowe Township under the auspices of the Sto-Rox Emergency Committee in the gymnasium of Mike Bryan High School, McKees Rocks, tonight. Seven bouts in all are listed.

Terry Waner, of the North Side, and Steve Senich, of Homestead, have been matched for the opening bout on the Pal Silvers-Jocko Walters card at the Moose Temple Friday night. Marcus Nole and Billy Flanagan, middleweights, will box the second bout, and Mose Bitch will be sent against Johnny Warner in their much-postponed battle in the semi-final if Bitch's injured eye will permit him to box this week.

Freddie Edwards, Chester (W. Va.) welterweight, and Freddie Fitzgerald, of Youngstown, will box the main bout at Canton, O., next Monday night. Teddy Welch, of McKeesport, boxes Ted Yarosz, of Monaca, in one of two eight-round preliminaries.

Johnny Dunn, New Kensington feather-weight boxer, Manuel Castro in a main bout at Zanesville, O., next Monday night.

Today—St. Patrick's Day—marks the thirty-fourth anniversary of the famous Bob Fitzsimmons-Jim Corbett fight at Carson City, in which the so-called solar plexus punch won the heavyweight championship for Ruby Bob.

Fights carded tonight include: Joe Feld man vs. Ray Tramble, Indianapolis; Babe Ross vs. Johnny Mason, Columbus; vs. Young Rudy vs. Jimmy Mollette and Frankie Ruffo vs. Steve Selma, Allentown; Phil Glick vs. Kaplan vs. Tony Ferrente and Harry Wallach vs. Phil Canamere, New York; Walter Cobb vs. Big Jeff Curtoff, West Palm Beach, Fla., and Andy DeVodi vs. Paulie Walker, Los Angeles.

Pat Haley and Danny Devine, two fighting Irishmen, box the ninepoint at the Columbia Club, Philadelphia, Friday night.

Larry Madge and Joe Tripodi, box one half of the double wilmup card, with Jimmy Thomas, local Negro welterweight, and Vic Mazzeo, in Cleveland next Monday night.

Announcement that Battling Nelson, former lightweight champion, will assist Frank Klaus, former middleweight champion, in seconding Jimmy Belmont, of Braddock, against Billy Alger in the main bout at McKeesport Thursday night, has stimulated interest in the bouts to the extent that Promoter Jim McGirr is enjoying the novel experience (for this season) of being deluged with telephone reservations for seats.

Two Knockouts In Amateur Show

Two of five amateur bouts at Croatian Hall, Duquesne, last night, sponsored by the Republican Club, failed to go the limit. In the 135-pound class Tony Terrac, McKeesport A. C., was knocked out in the first round by Al Vanora, H. T. Little Club, and in the 147-pound class Andy Conrad, Superior A. C., scored a technical knockout over Joe Hughes, Republican A. C., in two rounds.

John Washko, Republican A. C., lost a three-round decision to Harry Nelson, McKeesport A. C., and Ed Lowestetter, McKeesport A. C., lost the decision to Gerald Clements, Braddock A. C., in three rounds in the 126-pound class. J. Bell, Republican A. C., fighting in the 147-pound division, won the decision over Eli Richardson, Superior A. C.

Bill Simendinger refereed and Lee Mortimer and George Weitzell were the judges.

Wrestling Confab In Session Here

A conference between Havey J. Boyle, athletic commissioner for Western Pennsylvania, and a group of wrestling promoters was held in the William Penn Hotel today to go over the involved situation brought about by the number of applications for permits to operate in Pittsburgh.

Maurice Fishman, of Philadelphia, was one of the promoters at the meeting. He was supposed to have been side-tracked from the local scheme of things in favor of Arthur Sharkey, of Atlantic City, who is said to represent a Toronto (Canada) promoter named Michaeloff.

CARDS, REDS DEAL PENDING

BRADENTON, Fla., March 17.—(AP.)—Despite a denial from the Big Boss, members of the St. Louis Cardinals, especially the outfielders, wondered today whether a deal between the Cardinals and the Cincinnati Reds was in the making. Manager Dan Howley, of the Reds, visited camp yesterday, supposedly in search of an outfielder. President Sam Breadon, of the Cards, said no deal was pending, but that failed to keep the players from speculating a bit.

ED MORGAN SIGNS

NEW ORLEANS, March 17.—(AP.)—The lure of baseball has proved too strong for Eddie Morgan. The young slugging first baseman of the Cleveland Indians signed his contract last night and shelved his ambition to manufacture boxes for the summer at least. No figures were made public, but it was announced some time ago he had been offered a substantial increase.

TWO CHISOX RELEASED

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 17.—(AP.)—Two more players, Infielder John (Blondy) Ryan and Catcher Victor Siegel, were released by the White Sox yesterday. Ryan, former Holy Cross College star, was sent to Atlanta on option, while Siegel was shipped home. He probably will be placed with some Three-Eye League club.

SHERLOCK SOLD

SAN DIEGO, Cal., March 17.—(AP.)—Jack Sherlock, Philadelphia Nationals' infielder, has been purchased by the Hollywood club, of the Pacific Coast League, in spring training here.

North Central Body Opens Sports War

CHICAGO, March 17.—(AP.)—The North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, an organization unheard of by the average coach until a year ago, has opened its annual conference with the attention of the college athletic world focused on it.

Armed with extensive surveys of the university, college and high school athletic situation in its territory of 20 middlewestern states, the association was expected to issue far-reaching orders to curb the so-called "over-emphasis" of sports and to back up its orders by suspending and member institution rebelling against them.

Kraffert is Victor On Pinehurst Links

PINEHURST, N. C., March 17.—(AP.)—Benjamin F. Kraffert, Jr., of Titusville, Pa., added a 75 yesterday to his 74 to win the Tin Whistles golf championship with a score of 149 for the 36 holes medal play. The victory was Kraffert's third here this season. Previously, he had captured the annual spring tournament and the Pine Needles event.

Donald J. Ross, of Little Compton, R. I., finished second with 151. Richard S. Tufts, Pinehurst, former champion, who took 153 strokes, was third.

SELLING MOVE UNSETTLES MARKET

Weakness in Electrical Equipments, Rails Gives List Uneven Appearance

NEW YORK, March 17.—(AP.)—Bull leaders in today's stock market found Wall street stubbornly refusing to ignore the current low level of corporate profits, despite promises of improvement later in the year.

Bullishness developed some aggressiveness in the morning but selling of the electrical equipment and rail issues unsettled the market by noon. A somewhat cheerless report by the president of Missouri-Kansas-Texas in announcing passage of dividends on the common stock, initiated last year, was a bearish influence.

During the morning several of the utility, food and merchandising issues worked substantially higher.

Conditions at this market however, continued more encouraging to traders looking on the other side of the peak movement. Again the declines showed no important volume of stock for sale. Bears now have to contend with the widespread belief that the business cycle has reached bottom and is slowly bending upward. Most of the important economic advisory services agree on that point. One states that the current period offers one of the four great investment opportunities of the past generation. Another, after having been bearish for 18 months, tells its clients this week that the next important turn will be upward. It is notable, however, that these services generally agree that improvement will be slow and advise clients to buy stocks only on declines.

President Cahill, of the Katy Railroad, in discussing the dividend action, declined to make a prediction as to the near term outlook, but was of the opinion that 1932 will see a return of good business.

Selling of the electrical equipments appeared to be based on trade reports that the incoming volume of business is none too satisfactory. Westinghouse's annual report showed a sharp shrinkage in its backlog of unfilled business, and General Electric's report is expected to make a similar showing.

Credit continued in excessive supply in the call loan market, with outside offerings at 1 per cent. Nevertheless, the release of funds through the Treasury overdraft was somewhat smaller than expected. The weekly condition statement of reporting banks showed moderate declines in both commercial loans and loans against securities.

M. K. T. OMITS DIVIDENDS

NEW YORK, March 17.—(AP.)—Directors of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad today omitted declaration of another dividend on the common stock, on which three payments of $1 each were made in 1930.

The initial dividend to be paid on this stock was on June 30, last, and neither that nor the two subsequent payments were designated as placing the issue on a regular dividend basis. Wall street had not expected payments to be continued, owing to the shrinkage of rail revenues.

Expect Good Showing By National Biscuit In First Quarter

National Biscuit is one of the companies which was able to make an exceptionally good showing last year. Interests close to the management have said that earnings for the first quarter of 1931 will make a favorable comparison with those for the corresponding period a year ago. The stock could be one of the leaders with any change for the better in the general market.

Early last week when many in Wall street were confident that no change would be made in the New York Central dividend, little was heard concerning the probability of a reduction by Baltimore and Ohio when its directors meet this week. Now, however, the discussions of the Baltimore and Ohio dividend are more general, and many in the financial district are confident of a reduction. With the Central dividend cut, the doubts relative to payments by other roads have been increasing rapidly. That has helped to bring selling into the carrier group in recent sessions.

Gross revenues of western transcontinental railroads for February are likely to show even larger declines from a year ago than the decrease in car loadings would indicate. That is because the long haul freight traffic generally declined more sharply than the short haul traffic. The results of the St. Paul, the first large western carrier to report for February, confirm that prospect. St. Paul's gross revenues were off 21.6 per cent for the month, whereas car loadings had shown a decline of only 18.8 per cent.

A factor confronting the market is the outcome of the present run of dividend reductions and omissions. There is little doubt but that investment sentiment is being severely tested by the unfavorable dividend announcements which to date have not been reflected marketwise to any great extent. Just how much liquidation from investment sources will be brought about remains to be seen.

Forces involved in the transfer of new Treasury securities were experiencing their busiest day in some four years yesterday. It was estimated that the aggregate actual turnover of securities ran to the largest proportions in about that length of time. The Federal Reserve Bank in New York, acting as the fiscal agent of the Treasury Department, and the leading houses dealing in government securities, were literally snowed under momentarily, but reported their plans for handling the business had been worked out well ahead of time and that the struggle was progressing satisfactorily. Approximately $2,500,000,000 in government securities had to be provided for, but the burden was lightened somewhat by reason of the fact that holders of the Liberty 3½s had been permitted to turn in their bonds against delivery of new securities about a week ago.

The cotton market appears to be disposed to follow the ups and downs in silver bullion quite closely just now. The Far East is a tremendous consumer of cotton in finished form, and consequently there is always a rather close relation between the two commodities. The relentless decline in the price of silver over the last few years, resulting in tremendous contraction in buying power of that part of the world was undoubtedly a powerful influence back of the acute drop in cotton, though, of course, the matter of supply and demand was unquestionably the real factor. Yesterday silver rose 1⅛ cents an ounce in our market to a new high for the recovery at 31⅜ cents, a recovery of 6⅝ cents from the February 16 low of 25¾ cents, and cotton shot forward about $1.25 a bale.

What Workers Think About Wage Cutting

—By B. C. FORBES—

IS WHAT DO workmen think of suggestions from exalted quarters that the return of prosperity would be hastened by reduced wages? Emphatic clear-cut answers are coming to this column following a recent reference to pleas by big bankers that wages should be lowered.

Mr. Forbes

Having presented arguments on one side, shall we fail to let workmen and others have their say?

HERMAN ZEISHOLD, Elizabeth, N. J., writes:

"Although I am much too busy with work, I feel I must voice resentment against the recurring talk to re-establish an economic status that was. Paring at the bottom is the policy of the coward. The solution of critical problems or times rests with the top—with the supposedly superior intelligences. We seem not to have them.

"Never has a critical time disclosed such an absence of constructive leadership and consequent disillusionment as to the caliber of men whom one once was inclined to respect. Mail this home with your customary candor and the shame of it may fire some ambitions. It is in heart and mind of the multitude which has no regard for fair weather leadership."

A NEVADA lady, Jane J. Fowler, says:

"If the officials of such concerns as Bethlehem Steel could see off the ends of their noses, they would know, without being told, that their master minds could work overtime without accomplishing one thing if it were not for the men in the shop. Why not include them in the bonus system?

"If this had been done, we would not now be in the throes of this wicked depression. I have seen both sides of this question, for I am the daughter of a successful manufacturer and the wife of a telegraph operator.

"Give the worker more credit and the official less. Give the worker his share of the bonus, for at the rate the officials are piling up the cash they can afford to worry along with less."

FROM N. L. HOLMES, Bronson, Mich., comes a communication lengthy enough to fill this column twice over. These sentences sound his keynote:

"Capital's theme song is to remunerate those who are able with immense rewards, and for the mediocre nothing save a bare subsistence. Capitalism provides a perfect path for those who are strong and 'to him that hath shall be given' is the big idea. The employing class can't see anything but capitalism. That is a natural consequence of being born and brought up in such a system.

"If employers could remedy industry as regards unemployment without destroying themselves industrially, they would do so, but they can't. To so arrange it whereby every man and every woman shall have an opportunity to work and an opportunity to play,' it will be necessary to dig clear down to the rock base of industrial ethics and junk the capitalistic structure completely, and vest the ownership of industry in the people collectively and kiss private ownership goodbye forever.

"Right now, in this month of March, 1931, we have millions of willing workers on charity, because we are able to produce too much. If such a condition won't cause humans to wake up and use their heads, surely there is nothing else that will."

S. EDWARD KATELY, Chicago, writes:

"If the people who talk about reducing wages to make business better would read 'Looking Forward' by Henry Ford and Samuel Crowther, I think they would see things in a different light. Or just a little thinking on their own part would make them see where they are wrong. The only people who are helped by a reduction in prices are those who are living on fixed incomes, not wages.

"I have worked for close on to 50 years, and certainly don't want the conditions returned that existed then. I am sure from your writings that you don't believe as the Wiggins and the Roberts do. Can't see how any thinking person can believe that prosperity will be improved by lowering wages. It would be like taking the lubrication out of a machine—it would not go far."

THERE YOU have the viewpoint of those who feel they would be directly affected by any downward revision of wages.

It is hard for bankers or economists or anybody else to convince wage earners that with the cost of living down more than 10 per cent everyone would be able to buy just as much as ever before were wages and salaries and every form of income lowered 10 per cent.

If business recovery materializes, advocates of wage-cutting are unlikely to get to first base. In this work-a-day world not only theories but actualities have to be taken into account.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, March 17.—The curb market was quietly firm today. Here and there an issue moved into new high ground for the year, as speculation for the time met with a thin volume of offerings, but fluctuations generally were small.

Larry Learns Actress Is The Real Delight

CHAPTER XXVIII.

It was over coffee at the French place to which Larry took Diana that she said, impulsively:

"See here, you've been awfully decent to me. I appreciate it. I'm pretty lonely here. I joined the revue shortly before sailing. A girl had dropped out—Lady Frances Warner—"

"Another title?" he interrupted, rudely.

"A real one, that time. She dropped out to marry a fat man called Smith, with all the money in the world. So I dropped in. I don't know any of the girls or people in the company very well. I was vilely seasick coming over, and I rather hate New York. It's changed so."

She tapped herself up and then smiled.

"That was a slip," she admitted, "but it doesn't matter. It isn't to your interest to publish bad publicity."

"Then you have been here before? Oh, don't worry," he said, as he saw her hesitate. "this is between us. Speak up, you're among friends."

Born in America

"My lad, I was born here!" she admitted. "I've sort of sniffed around, looking for relatives—of any father, you see. But no luck. All dead or West or in jail or something."

"What about the Lady Diana part?" Larry wanted to know.

"More bilge. They had to get a lady by hook or crook. One. I mean, with a capital L. So I volunteered. No one can take us up on it as I am not using that nom de guerre on the program. And publicity is always supposed to be lies or just fiction, without the knowledge or consent of the publicized person. So that's all right. Do I not," she inquired severely, "look like a lady as far as you can judge?"

"You sure do. So you're an American! I would never have believed it!" said Larry frankly.

"Oh, I've lived over there most of my life," she told him, smiling, "so I've become English, I suppose."

She went on to tell him that she had been on the stage for years.

"I don't suppose that 35 business fooled you?" she asked wistfully.

Again he was teased by an elusive reminder and groped to place it, but could not.

"It certainly did!" he replied gallantly.

"You are a nice boy!" she told him gratefully. She pushed aside her plate and stared thoughtfully at his pleasant, attractive face. It had been a long time since she'd met anyone she'd liked as well, with no nonsense about him and she instinctively felt that he liked her, too, and would help her.

"Married?" she asked, suddenly.

He shook his head, smiling.

"Not yet," he admitted.

"In love, of course," she pursued.

Larry made round eyes.

"Now why should you think that?" he began, but she laughed at him in the low-ceilinged, smoky room, filled with the chatter of people, the scurrying of waiters, the subdued clatter of crockery and the odors of very good food.

"Well, if not you should be," she said.

"Must I admit it?" he begged.

"Please. Tell me all about her."

"No, you first. Tell me more about yourself, really, not press agent stuff," he urged.

She told him a little. She'd been up against it lately. This engagement had come as a godsend. She'd played in London and in the provinces, even in the colonies and had had good times and bad. And here she was again a new arena, another chance. She wanted very badly to make good.

A Great Discovery

In return he told her about Jenny. Any young man in love will know something of his rhapsody. Diana Hackett listened, smiling a little, and not quite happily. Her rather haggard, still lovely face looked years younger.

"You rave," she told him, like a boy I used to know back in the war days—though she went on in mock alarm, professionally I am not supposed to have known anything about the war save from a nursery standpoint."

"I won't betray your fatal secret. What was his name?" asked Larry with idle interest.

"Lorrimer. I was crazy about him," she said, half dreamily. "But he was killed."

Larry stared at her. He wanted to shout, to grasp her hands, to call her by name. Now he knew the resemblance which had worried him. She was a little like Mary You—small, red-haired, blue-eyed, the same shaped face, the features not unlike. A little like a carbon copy, an elder sister who had seen a good deal of life.

But she mustn't know—until he had seen Mary Lou and told her, until they decided what to do. He must see Margaret Lorrimer, too. His thoughts raced. He was still staring, flushed with excitement. And she asked him, amused:

"What's the matter? Why on earth are you staring like that?"

Obediently he dropped his eyes to her hands. He saw that she wore one ring, a man's, a seal ring. He said, greatly daring:

"Sorry to be rude. I was wondering—I am sure it is pretty—I was wondering what your real name could be?"

"Real name? But I've had," she admitted, "a few . . . in my time.

"The one you were born with. Is it really Diana Hackett?" he asked.

"No, but it has the same initials. I almost forget it, at times," she said, a little bitterly. "It doesn't suit me very well any more—for it is . . . Delight. Delight. Delight Harford," she said.

Delight Harford . . . !

Dimmed Beauty

Larry stared at her. After a minute:

"It's a very pretty name," he commented, inanely.

"Isn't it? So appropriate, too," she responded with a definite acidity. Her face dropped into lines of relaxation. All that her life had made of her was written there, all that her life had brought her. One could trace in the fine cobweb marks about eyes and nose and mouth the years of contrasting circumstances, too good living, semi-starvation, hope, despair, and a feverish gayety. She'd not had an easy time, this Delight Harford, and the gifts with which she had been liberally endowed at her birth, gifts of health and vitality, laughter and strength, she had squandered for something less than the usual pottage.

Yet she had still a partly obliterated, a dimmed but discernible beauty, fine contours, lovely modeling, a skin which had withstood much of the wear and tear as far as natural coloring and texture was concerned. She made Larry a little sick somehow, so like, and so unlike, Mary Lou she now seemed to him.

Later he took her back to the apartment, thanked her for "an elegant evening" and promised to see her soon again. Then he went home to his lodging house room and took his red head in his hands and tried to think himself—and all of them—out of this situation, a situation which appeared to contain within itself all the devastating powers of dynamite.

His first impulse was to telephone Mrs. Lorrimer. But on second thought he decided that he would tell Mary Lou first of all. She was a sane little person, was Mary Lou, level-headed and clear-eyed. She would know what to do, whether to tell Lorrimer at once or whether, which was Larry's final conclusion, to investigate Diana's story a little more fully before Lorrimer was told.

Writes to Mary Lou

He wrote to Mary Lou that night. He had, he said, something important to tell her, and would be out on the following afternoon. He had promised Jenny to come for the weekend, but would stop at Westwood first. Could she, by any happy chance, get rid of Lorrimer for a few minutes? He must see her alone, Larry wrote, in his scrawling hand, and, sealing the envelope, went out to the mail box with it, and listened to its tiny thud as it dropped in. That set him thinking about letters and their veiled import . . . he saw people all over the world carelessly or desperately dropping into letter boxes those folded, enveloped, pieces of paper, marked over with little symbols that spelled joy, success, failure, hope, despair, terror and loss or gain, to the eyes which, eventually, deciphered them.

He thought of mothers, waiting for words of lovers; and thinking of lovers he thought of his Jenny and walked idly about the streets, under the spring stars. Delight Harford forgotten, everything forgotten but his own amazing happiness, after the manner of young men in love.

Mary Lou, when the letter reached her in the noon mail, went to Mrs. Lorrimer with it, showed it to her with a gesture of amazement.

"What's on his mind, do you suppose?" she asked the older woman.

"Heaven knows. Jenny, I fancy. Maybe he wants you to select the ring," laughed Mrs. Lorrimer.

"Lorry?" said Mary Lou, doubtfully. "What'll I tell him?"

"Nothing," replied Mrs. Lorrimer cheerfully. "I have to go over to the Westchester greenhouses to select some plants I want in the south border. Travers shall go with me. You can beg off. In fact, I won't ask you!"

DAILY TRUE STORY — Noblesse Oblige

Sid Thatcher's roadster was purring along like a contented kitten, and making scarcely any more noise.

Sid was headed for his "Farm," in reality an imposing country estate where he employed a flock of agricultural experts. As he rounded a sharp curve in the highway he saw a large black car ahead of him.

Through the rear window he could see that four men were in the car and one of the men in a rear seat was in the act of holding an automatic within a couple inches of the head of the man in front of him.

They were taking someone for a "ride." This was clear enough to Sid, and from the unsuspicious bearing of the man beside the driver the intended victim it was evident that he was about to be double-crossed, believing that he was with friends.

The idea didn't appeal to Sid at all. He stepped on his gas good and hard, so hard that his car crashed into the rear of the car ahead with startling results.

The crash rattled the driver ahead and in trying to control the machine he swerved into the gully so that it went over on its side.

The man-about-to-be-put-on-the-spot clambered up out of the door on his side.

"I'm pretending to apologize to you," Sid said in a low voice, "but what I'm telling you is that the man behind you had a gat right up against your head—"

The intended victim scarcely showed surprise.

"I got you," he said, and in a louder voice, "That's all right, guy—I know you came around a curve."

The first man to get to his feet turned to pull a companion out.

"Hop in, you sap," Sid invited.

The man hopped in and Sid muttered, "Let's see if the old bus is able to go."

It was.

Flee From Wreck

He scooted away from there without even looking back at the shouting and cursing men.

Sid kept right on going. For five miles he went at a terrific speed, and then his companion shouted, "How far?"

"Another mile."

The mile was covered in about a minute, or so it seemed. Sid turned in at his "farm." A man came out to take his car.

Sid took the chap into a large, cool library, and invited him to make himself comfortable. He told a servant to bring drinks.

"None for me, thanks," said the chap.

"That's right 'Drop' Farley doesn't drink, does he?"

"So you know me, Mr. Thatcher?"

"It's even, you know me."

"Sure I know you. I've seen you at half the night clubs in town."

"Never mind that. Where do you want to go?"

"Back to town, but it isn't healthy for me to go just yet. I'll go cross-country to a place I know."

"I have a better idea, Farley, if you're in danger here."

"They'll right the car and come on here, or hold up another car and come on. They knew your car, all right."

"I'll take you back in my plane, Farley."

He nodded. A few minutes later they took off from Sid's private landing field. Sid landed "Drops" Farley at the Newark field.

"You're one square guy, Thatcher, and I'll try and do as much for you some day."

They shook hands and Sid took off and went back to his country place.

Other matters came up right then to make Sid forget this.

Sid was in love.

Sid had known Julie Rawson for years. They had been great pals. He was one of the ushers when she married Howard Varney. He continued to be friendly with Julie, as usual, although he never had much use for Varney and often wondered why Julie married him.

Falls in Love

Julie's sister, Rita Rawson, came home from France, where she had been studying for four years.

Sid remembered Rita a kid of 15, ungainly, giggly and somewhat of a tom-boy.

When he met Julie on the avenue with her and acted as though he expected an introduction they had a good laugh. It was an entirely different sort of Rita and Sid feel in love with her on sight.

This pleased Julie.

It also pleased Rita, for she considered Sid Thatcher to be the answer to a maiden's prayer so far as she was concerned.

There was only one rift. Julie was unhappy. She wasn't hitting it off so very well with her husband. Naturally this made Rita very sad, and anything that made her sad didn't cheer Sid in the least.

Julie became decidedly despondent, and went about with some rather gay friends of hers, trying to forget that her husband was chasing here and there along the primrose path.

Sid happened to drop into the Green Slipper late one night with some friends, and saw Julie at a table with Sue Olmstead and her brother. Sid was surprised, because Sue's brother was Tom Varney's closest pal. Olmstead was called away and, to Sid's surprise, Sue followed.

But Sid had another surprise coming. Julie collapsed at the table. He went over to her. He knew the head waiter slightly.

"Somebody handed her a Micky Finn," Sid accused. The head waiter protested that he knew nothing about it.

Julie was scarcely able to stand, and in no mental state to know what she was doing. Sid helped her out to the cloak room, got her things and managed to get her out to his car.

On the way to her apartment she passed out completely. He had to carry her up to her apartment, and he had to ring her bell. If her husband came it would be embarrassing. But only her maid replied.

The next day nothing was heard of it.

That night Sid left word with his man that he would be at the Green Slipper and to tell Miss Rawson if she called. Sid wanted to hang a round and find what he could pick up about Julie and the Olmsteads.

As he was sitting alone at a small table a chap came and sat down opposite.

"Hello, there," he said.

It was Farley.

"I've never had no chance to half thank you, Mr. Thatcher. Perhaps you didn't know that all three of those birds who tried to put the heat on me got bumped?"

"No, I didn't, Farley. Say, last night a married woman, a perfectly straight married woman got a Mickey Finn here. I suspect the people she was with, but could you find out if any of the employes here provided it or helped in that little stunt?"

"I can make a try."

Rita came rushing in just then and over to Sid.

Granted Divorce

"Oh, Sid," she gasped, "that was just a trick, and Tom is sending officers or something to subpena you to testify that Julie was drunk. They'll be here now and you can't testify against poor Julie—Tom wants to frame her and save alimony and—"

"I'll beat it," Sid said, standing up.

It was too late. A waiter was pointing him out to two men.

Farley had heard and seen.

"Sit tight for a minute and then beat it," he said to Sid. He gave a sign and three men joined him. They moved over to the two process servers and started to get into a fake fight with each other. Shots were fired and the place went wild. Sid and Rita escaped during the riot. Sid getting away to his country place, which was safely out of the state.

Later Julie got her divorce and then Sid and Rita were married. Among their wedding presents was a set of gold cocktail cups. There was a card with it and on the card only two words:

"Noblesse Oblige."

SOME ODD FACTS

Science has discovered that the pressing of clothes may have a higher function than that of merely keeping a knife-edge crease in the trousers. A German institute director has recently performed experiments with mechanical ironing machines whereby overcoats, trousers and blankets were completely sterilized of disease-producing bacteria.

When we complain about our climate we should remember that Cherra Punji in Assam is worse off. There the average annual rainfall is about 460 inches with a "record" of 900 inches.

One of the geograpical mysteries of the state of Michigan is an island that every summer comes to the surface of Lake Orien, and every winter goes back to the depths from whence it arose.

Statistics show that the average British woman now weighs 110 pounds, is 5 feet 2 inches in height, has a pull of 183 pounds, and a grip of 58 pounds.

Hawaii is the largest island of the group which bears its name, and it contains the greatest amount of volcanic activity. Nearly, if not all, the land above sea level has within comparatively recent times been covered with hot lava or other eruptive material. Although covered with fissures and blow-holes, the soil is in many places fertile.

The largest flower in the world is said to be Arnold's rafflesia. The entire flower measures about a yard across and weighs about 15 pounds. The center, containing stamens and pistil, is a foot wide. Each petal is a foot long and ¼-inch in the thinnest part.

Along some parts of Maracaibo Lake, Venezuela, the natives raise their huts on poles. They dare not build on the soft, swampy banks, and this type of habitation permits them to attend to their fishing from the front door, while from the back they can keep a watchful eye on their small patches of cocoa on the mainland.

Kline's Costly Monogram

There Is No Excuse for Squandering the People's Money on Costly Trinkets.

The investigation, growing out of the Department of Supplies scandal, of expenditures made by the city under Mayor Kline's administration has directed attention to many extravagances which, if not illegal, are at any rate morally inexcusable.

The large monogram of the Mayor's initials, "C. H. K.," placed on the radiator of the $6,746 automobile bought by the city for Kline's use, may be taken as typical.

Making the taxpayers pay $732 for special custom-built tires for the machine was bad enough, but mulcting them of $75 additional for pretty gewgaws was shameless.

At a time like this, when many people scarcely have enough to eat and not a few of the taxpayers have been compelled to do without things that most persons regard as necessities of life, in order to have the money to pay their taxes, it will strike the average citizen as downright wicked that there should have been taken out of the city treasury $75 to put unnecessary trinkets on Kline's car.

Good Advertising

Pittsburgh Would Benefit If Manufacturers Stenciled City's Name on Local Products.

There is a display of canaries in the show window of a downtown store, and each of the little wooden cages is marked "Made in Germany."

German manufacturers and exporters have been advertising their country in that way for many years. They have found it a very satisfactory way.

Congressman Erk proposes that Pittsburgh manufacturers advertise this city in the same way. He remarks in a letter to the Sun-Telegraph that if the local makers of structural steel, for example, were to stencil "Pittsburgh, Pa.," on every plate and shape that goes out of their works it would go far to spread the fame of Pittsburgh as a center of steel manufacture.

The plan would benefit Pittsburgh and it would benefit the manufacturers. People in the numerous cities in which skyscrapers of Pittsburgh steel are erected, on seeing the beams and girders marked "Pittsburgh' would, in time, turn to the city instinctively when in need of such material.

The plan would apply equally well to many other local products.

Capital Punishment

Pennsylvania Has an Opportunity to Get Rid of This Barbarous Relic of the Dark Ages.

The interest shown in the public hearing which the House Judiciary General Committee is holding on the Turner bill for the abolition of capital punishment reflects a widespread feeling that Pennsylvania should get rid of this barbarous relic of the dark ages.

If capital punishment were more effective than any other penalty in preventing capital crimes, the advocates of its abolition would have little to say. But, as Gov. Woodring, of Kansas, said, in vetoing a bill for the restoration of the death penalty in that state, "it is not the severity but the certainty of punishment that deters the criminal," and states which have capital punishment are no more free from murders than states which impose life imprisonment as the maximum penalty.

The opponents of capital punishment are not influenced by maudlin sentiment, but by practical considerations and a sense of decency. The Pennsylvania Prison Society, which is leading the fight at Harrisburg for the abolition of the death penalty, is an organization of practical penologists, not visionary sentimentalists.

Restoring Penn's Woods

Private Tree Planters Are Doing Splendid Work to Increase the State's Timber Supply.

The State Department of Forests and Waters at Harrisburg reports it has received orders from private planters for more than 7,000,000 tree seedlings to be planted this spring. The department furnishes the seedlings free to persons who will agree to plant a sufficiently large number, and states that it still has some white pine, pitch pine, red pine and black locust seedlings available for distribution.

Supplementing the reforestation work that is being done in Pennsylvania by the state and federal governments, the private planters are rendering splendid service. Many a barren hillside has been clothed with a new tree growth through their efforts. These plantings check erosion of the soil, protect water supplies, provide a future supply of timber, and beautify the landscape.

As showing how rapidly the seedlings grow, James S. Pates, president of the Export Coal Company, reports that some which the company set out on stripped coal land in 1924 are now from 10 to 12 feet high and three to five inches in diameter.

Posterity will bless the tree planters.

An Unwise Bounty

The State's Reward for the Killing of Goshawks Results In Destruction of Useful Birds.

Representative Neely, of Sewickley, has made a sensible proposal in the bill which he has introduced in the House for the repeal of the bounty now paid by the Commonwealth for the killing of goshawks.

The goshawk is admittedly a destroyer of game and chickens, and unworthy of protection. But the average person is unable to distinguish it from other hawks which not only are comparatively harmless but are really useful. The result is that the bounty on the goshawk has caused the destruction of many of the other birds.

Of the hawks that have been sent in to the Game Commission this winter by persons claiming the bounty for killing goshawks, only a few proved to be of that species. The majority were other kinds of hawks, and examination of their stomach contents disclosed that they had not been preying on game and poultry but on mice.

After all, the goshawk is not a common bird, and it is rely to be found in Pennsylvania except in winter; hence its truction of game cannot be very extensive.

New Loves for Old

When you've been all morning trotting
On a pair of high French heels,
And have sat, with aching tootsies,
Through a movie's seven reels;
When your toes are numb and weary
In your dainty Number Twos,
Tell me, what is so inviting
As a pair of good OLD SHOES?

When you've danced in silver slippers
'Til they feel like casts of lead,
And you're tired from your tiptoes
All the way up to your head,
Then, if anyone should ask you
What, in all the world, you'd choose,
'Twould be just to slip your feet in-
To a pair of good OLD SHOES!

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, March 17.—No other city is quite so "flower conscious" as New York. Buying flowers has become almost as much a daily rite as eating or riding in the subway. Even during the bleakest days of the world depression flower sales dropped but a trifle.

Twenty-five years ago Thorley was the lone Fifth avenue florist. Today there are two and often three floral shops to a block—a number occupying huge corner rooms with rentals in five figures. Park and Madison avenues have floral salons done in chrystal and decorated by Urban.

In the Times Square district alone are 67 flower stores. Down on the Bowery many old swing door saloons are now given over to posies. Until recently only curb hawkers with handsful of faded flowers were found in the slums. Today florists are numerous with dollar-a-dozen flowers.

In plutocratic areas residents often pay florists a fixed sum, ranging from $200 to $1,000 a month, to keep homes plentifully supplied and tastily decorated with cut flowers. Several new de luxe hotels offer fresh flowers daily.

Florists have become propagandists. Recently the bunch of orchids on milady's shoulder became passe. It was overdone by the gold diggers. Then a certain beautiful lady appeared in a smart cafe with a single orchid attached to a bracelet.

The bracelet innovation swept like wildfire. The trail blazer is said to have received $1,500 and free orchids. In the same fashion the red rose bud for the evening coat lapel was introduced by a young social blood in need of extra kudos.

Some of the more luxurious salons now employ salesmen and women with "name appeal" to solicit business. Thus an outmoded artist of stage and screen may find a new livelihood. Furnishing fresh flowers daily to ocean liner passengers is another trade getter.

Trans-Atlantic steamers attract a certain clientele. The Berengaria, for instance, is favored by young people. The Europa and Mauretania appeal to hurried business men. And at the moment no one seems to be taking any of them.

Livingstone, Pioneer Explorer, Missionary

By Archibald Henderson

One of the reasons for the far-flung extent of the British Empire is the exploratory instinct of her subjects. Willingness to go to the ends of the earth, to investigate strange and unknown territories, to live for years in unhealthy climates in the midst of dangerous and unfavorable circumstances—this spirit has characterized Englishmen throughout the history of the British Empire. One of the most famous of British explorers is David Livingstone, who, by his courage, patience and determination, opened up the dark continent of Africa to the world.

Like Stanley, who went to his rescue, Livingstone came of poor parents, and rose to heights of fame almost entirely through his own, unaided efforts. Born at Blantyre, Scotland, on March 19, 1813, he worked from his tenth to his twentieth year in a cotton factory, in his spare time acquiring a knowledge of Latin and Greek. While working as a cotton-spinner, he industriously prepared himself to become a medical missionary. After studying medicine at Glasgow and also theology, he became a medical missionary and was sent to South Africa by the London Missionary Society in 1840, ultimately establishing a mission in the valley of the Mabotsa.

The transition from missionary to traveler, through which Livingstone passed, is thus explained in the Book of Popular Science: He found that, wherever the foot of the Portuguese or Arab had fallen, the making of slaves was the staple industry. Terrible misery prevailed wherever he turned. He saw that in order to suppress this traffic a definite war by peaceful methods must be prosecuted. The natives must have an organized commerce. For that they must have well-mapped routes by which they themselves could travel in safety to carry their wares to the seaboards of the Atlantic and Pacific, and by which white men could advance into the interior to buy and barter. He set himself to find the paths, to master the languages, and to teach Christianity where he learned dialects and routes. To this end, Livingstone, although always a great Christian teacher in Africa, severed his connection with the society by which he had been sent out, to become an unfettered pioneer.

For five years, from 1849 to 1854, he made an exhaustive exploration of vast regions in the interior of the Dark Continent of which virtually nothing was known to the outside world. Among other discoveries, notably that of Lake Ngami, he found the mighty Zambesi River in the very heart of Africa. It solved the problem of a transcontinental route, for here was a certain highway to the eastern seaboard.

Although a "mere ruckle of bones" after this tour of exploration, his exploratory spirit was undimmed, and he set his face to the interior once more, shortly after this first tour. This second trip, together with the first, gave him a pretty clear idea of the main features of Central Africa. But he was unable to determine whether the great river he had been following was the Nile, the Lualaba or Congo. It was, in fact, the Congo—but death took him before he could settle the question.

Livingstone was the first white man ever to look upon the Victoria Falls, the most stupendous in the world. Even the Portuguese settlers in Africa, who since the days of Vasco de Gama, had named the Zambesi the "River of Good Signs," did not know of the existence of Victoria Falls. When Livingstone reached Quilimane, East Africa, in May, 1856, he had made a memorable record. He was the first white man in history to traverse Africa from west to east.

For the remainder of his life he made the most arduous explorations in Africa, making many discoveries and solving many mysteries. He was regarded as a world hero, and his remains lie buried in Westminster Abbey.

Object to High Rates

Residents of Three Large Pacific Coast Cities Operating Own Power Plants With Success.

By ALVARO C. SHOEMAKER

LEADERS in the electric utility and holding company fields now realize that they are facing a hostile public, aroused by having to pay unwarranted rates to support a watery tide of securities based upon tremendously inflated valuations.

How to deal with this aroused public opinion was the problem under discussion at a recent dinner given in New York City by problem discussion groups of the National Association of Owners of Railroad and Public Securities, Inc.

Concerned about the growth of sentiment for public ownership of electric utilities in the United States, and attacking claims of success made by supporters of the principle, Henry R. Hayes, vice president of Stone & Webster & Blodget, said:

"Such advocates like to cite many instances of successful operation under government or municipal ownership. The real basic fault in such claims is that in most instances of public ownership and management there is an obvious lack of sound accounting principles."

MANAGERS of public-owned electric utilities, striving for economy rather than dividends, know more than to compete with private enterprise in the field of fourth-dimensional accounting.

Their simple formula is to keep their business solvent, their service adequate and their rates low.

Following this plan of old-fashioned accounting and old-fashioned honesty with the public, three of the larger cities of the Pacific Coast—Seattle, Tacoma and Los Angeles—have made outstanding successes of their municipal electric utility ventures.

Typical of the rates and service of these three municipal enterprises, let us examine Seattle's record for facts that need no certified public accountant for interpretation.

During 1930 Seattle's public-owned utility sold to 95,000 customers more than five and one-half million dollars' worth of electric energy at an average rate of 1.784 cents a kilowatt hour. The average for the nation of all classes of electric service is 2.14 times higher.

The domestic rate in Seattle is 5½ cents a unit for the first 40 kilowatt hours, 2 cents a kilowatt hour for the next 200 and 1 cent a kilowatt hour for all over 240 such units used in a month. On this schedule, current for electric cooking and heating comes under the 2-cent and 1-cent rates. The result is that Seattle has more electric ranges than any other city in the world.

The average rate for domestic service in the United States for 1930 was 6.06 cents as shown by Electrical World of the issue of January 3, 1931 (page 28). The average rate for this service from the Seattle municipal plant for the same year was 2.83 cents.

Seattle is justly called the best-lighted city in America. City Light, the public-owned utility, operates the system and furnishes current and new lamps and globes at a rate of only 2.02 cents a kilowatt hour, or less than half the rate charged for such service in most cities by private power companies.

LOS ANGELES has one of the best municipal light and power systems in America and one of the most profitable. Both as owners and users the people of Los Angeles derive great benefit. As users they gained approximately $1,200,000 on rate reductions last year; as owners they gained an increase of $3,880,985 in the total of net assets during the last fiscal year, in which period the net income was $4,224,498.

It is a profitable public service institution, carefully and wisely conducted for the benefit of its owners, the people themselves.

The experience of Los Angeles and Seattle is repeated in Tacoma, where also the people own their light and power plant. Last year this municipal concern sold to 40,000 users 196,916,000 kilowatt hours of electric energy, at rates among the lowest in the United States, receiving therefor $2,211,000, of which nearly one-fourth—$515,232—was net income.

BY a system of bookkeeping supervised and checked by the state, the Seattle municipal plant made a net profit of considerably more than a million dollars last year after charging nearly three-quarters of a million to depreciation, and $1,346,000 was applied to bond redemption.

The plant has been operating since 1905, showing a profit every year since the first two. When it began operations it reduced the rate from 12 cents to 8½ cents—the 12-cent rate being a reduction from 20 cents because of impending threat of a municipal plant.

Successively, as its business increased, City Light reduced the residence rate to 7 cents, to 6 cents, and then to its present level.

The private company with which the city competes has, of course, been forced to meet the rates set by City Light.

In the course of his address at the New York dinner, Mr. Hayes said:

"Frankly, I have never been able to see just why there exists such a concerted effort to impress voters with the idea that there is much need for lower rates. . . . I do not notice any demand on the part of the customer, except in a few special instances, for lower rates."

Until Mr. Hayes and his associates can "see" and "notice" the general demand for lower rates, they will be unable to understand the growing public hostility toward the power trust.

The price they must pay for electricity is, fundamentally, the only thing about which users concern themselves.

They know nothing and care less about the contradictory economic philosophies of public and private ownership.

ONLY a few are even mildly concerned about the subversion of political government by the power trust.

But they are as much interested in cheaper electricity as they are in cheaper food and cheaper clothing and cheaper homes.

In pursuit of their desire for cheaper power, citizens of Seattle and other western cities made up their minds to SET THEIR OWN RATES BY OWNING THEIR PLANTS.

In the last election voters of Washington and Oregon made it possible for the benefits of public ownership of electric power systems, now enjoyed by some cities, to be extended to all the territory and people of the two states.

Having had bitter and expensive experience with state regulation, they have turned to the only regulation that regulates.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Restraint—isn't that the hardest thing you practice?

There are so many things you want to do, so many things you want to possess that you are fighting constantly against indulgence in them to a foolish degree.

The cause of most of your financial worry has been lack of control of your desires.

You did not want to disturb your mode of living—your methods in business, conditions in your establishment—and so you traveled the way of least resistance.

You saw the breakers ahead, but closed your eyes and hoped matters would change so that you might not be involved in shipwreck.

It isn't the scheme of things that life should pass without trouble.

It does not pay to be an ostrich and if you are unwilling to look life in the face and curb your desires, you will always have pitfalls ahead.
